Dear Vivian,

I got your latest letter with the Internet information on it. I have heard of many people who have had great luck finding valuable information on the Internet, but I will leave that to you. My computer hardly qualifies for the name. The date that comes up when I log in is 1980, so that should tell you what an antique I am dealing with here. My computer is so old that I can't find discs for it anymore, which makes sharing with others very difficult. However, I do have access to e-mail, and if you'd like to save postage, you can reach me at dkeeton@tso.cin.ix.net. I have a one-hour-a-day time limit, but since I am so reluctant to use my computer, that is plenty. I usually log on about 2 or 3 times a week.

I recently wrote to a man in Grundy, Virginia, named Donald McGlothlin, because I had found his name in a bio on some Russell County McGlothlins. He called me back and talked to me for a while. Although he apparently has done quite a bit of research, he is one of those people who would rather talk about it than document it! (He's not the first I've run into, and they can be very frustrating.) Anyway, he did have one very interesting piece of information: Eli McLaughlin was murdered in 1816 or 1817 in Russell County. How's that for news? He was killed by a man named John Elliot, who was sent to prison for nine years for the murder. Doesn't seem like much punishment for murder, does it? I sent to Russell County for whatever records they will send me. I don't have much luck with them--the last time I asked for information, it took 3 times to get the complete, correct document!

Besides that, Mr. McGlothlin doesn't believe that Eli was the son of either John or Jacob McGlothlin of Russell County, but rather a younger brother, but he didn't give me any good reason. The key may lie in Eli's age. On the 1810 census, Eli was between 26-45, which would be birth years between 1765 and 1784. (However, note that his wife Mary was 63 on the 1850 census, making her 23 in 1810, but the census also has her in the 26-45 group.) Of the three McGlothlin brothers, none was married before 1785, according to pension records.

According to Mr. McGlothlin, there were 3 brothers: Jacob, b. ca 1753; John, b. ca 1756; Steven, b. ca 1759. All three enlisted during the Revolutionary War in Mecklenburg Co. NC. During the War they were at Rogers Fort, Georgia, where their father (unnamed) was with them, and afterwards went to Edisto, South Carolina. Jacob's wife says they were married on the Catawba River. I believe all or most of this information can be found in their pension applications.

Mr. McGlothlin pointed me to the 1790 census of North Carolina, where I found all three brothers in Randolph county. Also there was an Ann McGloughlin with no males over 16, 3 males under 16, and 4 females. This could be a widowed sister-in-law, or as Donald McGlothlin seems to think, a widowed step-mother. Clearly, one of the 3 males under 16 could have been Eli. By the way, of the 3 brothers, only Jacob had a male under 16 in the household; the other 2 brothers had no children at all.

Donald McGlothlin also referred me to a book by Fred Wampler called The Wampfler Family 1701- (I missed the last date). He also might have said "Wampler Family", but it sounded like Wampfler, which I know was the original German spelling. Maybe you can find it, because he says it has Mary Wampler's father in it; he thought her father was John.

Speaking of pronunciation: Donald McGlothlin said that "McGlothlin" and "McLaughlin" are pronounced the same. Maybe in Virginia they are, but not here in Ohio! He even made a comment that one descendant spells it McLauflin, and couldn't understand the "f", but that's how I would pronounce McLaughlin.

Well, that's all I have for now. A very distant cousin in Amherst County, Virginia, recently made a major find for me, which links my ancestor to all the Amherst County Spencers. So I have had tons of new information on that line. I had always "known" that my Samuel was the son of Samuel, but now I have proof, and that takes me back 3 more generations on my Spencers. And clear back to Jamestown on several maternal lines. I've been very busy lately!

Your cousin,

Diane

Dear Diane:

I'm sure that this will be a very jumbled letter for I've hit something that just might help us on the Flanagan/McLaughlin puzzle.

It seems that I'm always in the process of learning about this PC of mine and in particular the Internet and how to use it. Just lately have I been able to feel that maybe I'm beginning to understand and just might be able to put this tool to work for me in my genealogy. I know that other people have but I'm just not one that can sit at the keyboard for hours on end and plow through all this 'stuff'. Then, of course, I had to be real smart and along with the rest of the world got caught up in the AOL fiasco...but only after I had paid a year in advance for their services. Then along about Nov of last year, I realized that I was not able to even get on line to use the service!! It is a little better now tho.

I downloaded some Irish/Scotch queries from AOL and got around to reading them the other day. There were several McLaughlin queries, two that looked promising for us which I got their E-Mail address.

Also found that they have a home page of the Web of the McLaughlin family Assoc. I've enclosed a copy of the page that a Mr. Daniel McLaughlin of Boca Raton, FL sent to me from which I read most all of the listings. Very interesting.
'Ancestor/Queries' was mostly from people that knew the county in Ireland where their ances. was from and for the most part the dates were mostly after the big potato famine of 1845. There were several I know,but our people were here long before that. From what I've read, I'm beginning the think that ours must have come over to avoid a small war of different sorts...perhaps when the English were trying their best to transplant some Scotch into Ireland or some other fracus.

I used the 'U.S. Phone listings' for VA, as listed on the Web page and checked for any Eli or Elijah but there were only a couple listed as 'E'McLaughlin, so I'll write to them. Also found two Philip(s) so that is some more to write.

The Irish/Scotch SIG (special interest group) meets on the Internet on Fri nights. I'm hoping that I will be able to luck out and get on line at that time.

Well that is all for now. Must run.

Dear Vivian,

I always enjoy getting letters from you. They are always full of bits of information; some day we are going to be able to piece together all these little jigsaw pieces and come up with a picture of Philip Flanagan and his ancestors!

Like you, I feel like I am spinning my wheels. After my great find of Eli McLaughlin and Mary Wampler, things have really gone flat. I haven't found anything new on Philip. I wrote to Anderson County, Tennessee, for his marriage record to Parthenia Hunter, and got a reply from a woman named Mary Harris who works at the County Archives. The marriage record is a minister's return with no information at all on it. Mary said she also looked for deeds and probate records on Philip, but found none. She also sent marriage records for 2 Frank Flanigans (1892 and 1895) and a Clarence Flanagan (1933), but of course I can't identify them. But she certainly did try to help.

I can straighten out a few things about Eli McLaughlin's family. Daughter Mary married James Allen on 7 May 1830 in Scott County, VA. Matilda married William Lambert on 12 Jul 1830 in Scott County, VA. Isreal McLaughlin married Elizabeth Dougherty on 18 Sep 1823 in Scott County. I found Isreal Mcglothlin, 48, on the 1850 Russell Co. census, with wife Elizabeth, 44, both born in Wythe County, with 8 children. I found the Wythe Co. census record for Joseph and Barbara Kinser, and a William and Margaret Lambert in Lee County, near a Jeremiah and Elizabeth Yeary (aged 50 and 46). But the women's names are never quite right, are they?

The Russell County McGlothlins seem to be the descendants of three brothers: Jacob, John and Stephen. From their Revolutionary War pension records, I have come up with these facts: (1) Stephen was born 3 Sep 1759 on the Edisto River, South Carolina. He married 11 Oct 1792 in Patrick County, VA, to Nancy Tait. They had 12 children. He died 26 Mar 1846 in Jefferson Co. TN, but had lived many years in Southwest Virginia. (2) John and Jacob were on the 1802 tax list for Russell County. John was born 26 Jan 1757. He enlisted in Mecklenburg County NC, and afterwards lived in Randolph Co. NC., Patrick Co. VA and finally Tazewell Co. VA, where he died 17 Feb 1848. John married Judith Leathers on 12 Apr 1785 in South Carolina. She is listed in 1850 in Russell County, age 85, birthplace North Carolina, living with her son Jacob, 58. John and Judith also had a son named Robert. (3) Jacob was born in about 1767. He enlisted in Mecklenburg Co. NC, and moved to Virginia in 1794. He died 22 Jan 1831 in Russell County. His wife's name was Mary; she is on the 1850 census in Russell County, age 82, birthplace South Carolina, living with Mary Mcglothlin, 42, and 11 children ranging in age from 20 years to 3 months.

Since Eli McLaughlin owned land in Russell County, I think it is likely that he is the son of either John or Jacob, but I don't know if we will ever be able to prove it.

Our Mary (Wampler) McLaughlin King was also on the Russell County census in 1850, living with Stephen E. and Sevanna Ratliff (30 and 26), both born in Wythe Co., and their 6 children, ages 11, 9, 7, 4, 2, and 3 months. Mary must have been widowed again by then. She was 63 years old, birthplace Wythe County.

Well, I really don't have much more to contribute. There's not really anything new in this letter--I just sort of rearranged some of our already-known facts to organize them into a likely story. I haven't come up with anything new at the library lately. It may be a while before I can sit down and do a lot of research for a while. We are actually having an early spring here, which means yardwork to do. I work for an auto dealership group with 6 stores; I was just told that I have to train the new accounts payable clerk at one of the other stores, which means I have to do my job and hers until she figures out what she's doing. So I foresee overtime in my future.

I really enjoy hearing from you and getting feedback on my theories. I've hit a dry spell on all my lines for the time being. So I may just cool it for a while and see if something comes to me. Talk to you later!

Sincerely,

Diane

Dear Diane:

I thought by now that I would have more on the McLaughlin(s) than what is enclosed. That shows that you really should not count your chickens before they hatch...I had given my info to a friend going to SLC for a week to do research. Wish I had kept a copy of the note that I sent her re the McLaughlins and what I wanted her to check for me. Anyway, I saw her at a meeting Saturday and she gave me some copies of papers and when I saw them, I had all I could muster to keep from yelling at her!!! She had given me the copies of the same records that you sent to me!!!!! I know that I had told her in the note that CL did not have much on Russell Co., VA and that I was particularily interested in their family histories. Oh well, live and maybe learn.

For some reason I started reading through our old letters that we had exchanged through the years. Did you realize that we first started in Jan of 1980?? I didn't, mercy the time flies.

I had a good laugh on myself and added to the list of things that I have promised myself that I would do periodically in genealogy...go back over the old files. In reading through these old letters yours and other Flanagan researchers, I came upon Emily Knod's letter to me in 1988...where she gave me the marriage of our Philip to Parthenia Hunter. How abou that? 'Course this was in the days when we didn't know that old Philip had remarried/or lasted as long as he did. She also listed a Philip Flanagan b 1841 son/Albert and Elizabeth Flanagan in Harrison Co., VA...maybe this is why our Philip didn't name any of his chillun after himself...perhaps a brother or Uncle or someone had dubs on the same???

I also found some SLC British Isle records from a 1994 trip that I made to Utah. Philip Flanagan, christening 17 Sep 1775 St. Leonards, Shoreditch, London, Eng. Father was John and Elizabeth Flanagan. Philip was b 27 Aug 1775 and christened on date above. John & Elizabeth had another son named, William b 8 Jasn 1778 and christened 8 Feb 1778.

The film didn't help me much when I tried to follow the married daus of our Eli McLaughlin. Sticking, at this point in time, to VA and Wythe Co., in 1850 there is a Joseph Kinser (p 291),55 yr. b VA with wife, Barbara 50 b VA. Also children from 23 to 7 yrs, (8 total). A William Lambert (pg 310) ,45 w /wife Susan and four ch, 13 - 6 mos. Same page as Lambert is a John McGlothlin 38, b Ireland with wife, Mary 35 b VA. with what appears as 5 ch. 11 - 3 yrs; in same household, a 89 yr old man, Caklif(?) Chindlt b VA with two females 40 and 35 yrs and one 14 yrs ; then in same household Edward and Samuel Wright 23 and 21 b VA; John Stornifer 14 and John Eakin 23. no occupations listed ..all b VA.

Three Jacob Kings in 1850 Wythe Co., VA... pg 239 Jacob King, Sr. 62 bVA, Elizabeth 60 5 ch from 18 -9 yrs.; pg 290 Jacob King, 60 bVA, Polly 61 bVA, 3 daus, 23-18 and 11 yr male., John Patton pg 329 Jacob King,33 bVA, Julia A. 31 4 girls 8-2 yrs. 1 male 6yrs. All b VA.

I assume that you have the 1850 census of VA and checked the indexed McLaughlin(s) in Russell Co. Only mildly interesting thing that I found there was a Mary McGlothlin 42 as head of household, b Russell Co. (one of those wonderful enumerators that put down the counties there were born in!!) her Real Estate value $1,470. oldest child, Martin 20 on down to her 11th, a 3 mo old. plus Mary McGlothlin, 82 widow b SC. Also a Neely P. for one of the children's names, I've seen this Neely as a Head of Household also.
(I always have this feeling that I'm repeating myself or your work, but in the off chance that we haven't checked what the other checked, guess it is best that we just go ahead and repeat)

Also, in this group of Russell Co., 1850 is Jacob McGlothlin 58, bNC, wife Elizabeth 46 b Tazewell Co., VA...all ch. b Russell Co. VA 8 in all from 18- 3 yrs and Judith McGlothlin, 85 living with them b NC.

I've transcribed these censese on charts, If you would like a copy, let me know. In 1870 Index there are two McGlaughlin, Isa M. 29 yrs. and John C. 31 both in Bath Co., VA; about 18 or 19 McGlothlin(s), oldest 52. They are mostly in Russell Co.; some in Buchanan Co., etc Didn't have time to look at the actual census record.

I double checked the listing that I sent to you last time of McLaughlin(s) think that it must of been a Bible record, anyway it was a handwritten listing of McLaughlin(s).At the bottom of this listing it said that these McLaughlins were from Londonville, OH which I found to be mispelled, must have meant, Loudonville, Holmes Co., OH . Maybe your Library has some records on Holmes co.,??

I have put in queries for McLaughlins in the Family Puzzler; and the Genealogy Bulletin put out by the AGLL people. (American Genealogical Lending Library), also in the NGS, Nat'l Gen. Soc. Bulletin. Maybe that will bear fruit for us. I sent out two letters yesterday, because I happened to see that the name of the person who had sent in the query was McLaughlin!!!

It is now 17 Feb and guess I should get this letter off the computer and in the mail, don't you think? My hard drive crashed, knew it was pending and so was backed up but it is still a mess to get back into the swing of things again. My Societies have kept me quite busy of late, so that has cut down on my researching at the Library. Plus we have had such nasty, messy weather. You guys have REALLY had nasty weather, don't know how you put up with it....I sure would be miserable....love the snow and etc but 'nuff is 'nuff, eh?

Good Luck with your research....gotta solve this Flanagan problem.

Dear Vivian,

I finally got a copy of the entry in the Russell County, Virginia, deed book which refers to Eli McLaughlin's heirs. It took three tries before they sent the complete, correct entry! I am also sending you a copy of the typed transcript I made of it.

I found "Philip Flanigan" on the 1870 Hawkins Co. TN census, page 77, family 87. His age is given as 72, occupation farmer, birthplace NC. With him is Mary, age 30, birthplace VA; Martha, age 21, VA; and Emeline Coley, age 18, VA. I looked in my Coley file and found in copies of Coley information sent to you by "Jim Francis" that Thomas Coley, Amanda Jane Coley Flanagan's brother, married a woman named Emaline; before the Civil War Thomas and his family moved to Tennessee. I will have to look in Tennessee records to see if Thomas Coley was living in Hawkins County in 1870. This 18-year-old Emeline Coley might be Thomas's daughter. From this census record, it seems that Elizabeth McLaughlin Flanagan had died by 1870.

On the 1880 census for Tennessee, I found Isaac Flannegan in Hawkins County, page 19, family 161. He is 40, a farmer, born in VA, father's birthplace NC (none given for mother). His wife is Martha J.

Also in 1880, Blount Co. TN, there is Harvey Flanegan, age 30, farmer, born in VA, father in NC, mother in VA. His wife is named Martha. I found a record of Harvey Flanagin and Martha Henderson marrying in Blount Co. on 24 May 1877. I believe these are Ike, age 21, and Harvey, 19, from the 1860 census, although I can't explain the difference in ages.

On the 1860 census, there was also a Rufus Flanagan living in Philip's household, although, at age 8, he seems too young to be a son--perhaps a grandson. In Alfred McGee's will, dated 16 March 1883 in Hawkins Co. TN, he refers to his niece Susan V. Flanegan, wife of Rufus Flanigan.

Other than the enclosed deed entry, I have not had much luck on Eli McLaughlin. Besides the 1810 census entry for "Ely" in Wythe County, I also found in Netti Schreiner-Yantis's Supplement to the 1810 Census that Elias McGlouglin was on the tax list in Russell County that year. There is a Mary McLaughlin on the 1820 census in Wythe County, so Eli may have been dead by then. But I also found in Netti S-Y's Archives of the Pioneers of Tazewell County, Elias McGlocklin "for rent" mentioned in an appraisement of Patrick Kindrick, Will Book I, dated 1829. The Revolutionary soldier, John McLaughlin, lived in Tazewell County at that time also.

I have tried to do some research on the Wamplers, but I have found no clues as to Mary Wampler's father. There is a book called Wamplers In America by Genevieve Shouse which the Cincinnati library does not own; it might tell us who Mary Wampler's father was.

I did find a remarkable coincidence while I was looking into the Wampler family. George Wampler, Sr., who was born in Germany, married Elizabeth Steffy in 1758 in Pennsylvania, and their son George Jr. married his first cousin, also named Elizabeth Steffy. Thinking the Steffy family might be worth looking into, I found that the immigrants Ulrich and Anna Maria (Schirmer) Stephan (Elizabeth Steffy Sr.'s parents) came to America in the 1740's, and after Ulrich's death Anna Maria married Casper Read in Heidelberg Twp, Pennsylvania. To my shock, I realized that Casper Read is my ancestor on my mother's side! My Read records called her Anna Maria Schirmer, widow of Stephan, and I had never known whether Schirmer was her maiden or married name, or whether Stephan was her husband's first name or last. Casper's daughter (by his first wife) married a Batdorf and after migrating through Western Maryland, the family settled in Rockbridge County, Virginia. There was absolutely no contact with my Wythe County people until my parents married in 1944! What a strange coincidence. Anyway, now I believe that our Mary Wampler was a daughter or granddaughter of George's brother Michael, so there is no connection with the Steffys after all (that I've found yet).

I hope this has helped a little. Maybe you can think of some new directions to look in. I thought I would see if there is a death record in Tennessee for Philip. And checking on the Coley/Flanagan connection in Tennessee might give us some clues on both families. I would not have expected to find Philip's daughter-in-law's family so closely involved with his; there may be more to this story.

Hope to hear from you soon. Have a happy, healthy 1997!

Your cousin,

Diane

Dear Mr. McLaughlin:

Thank you for your answer to my query. I appreciate the list of researchers and etc. The copy of the McLaughlin Internet Web page I have seen. You might be interested in the address of the man who is running the McLaughlin Assoc., if your source hasn't already sent it to you. I tried to enter my query via E-Mail using his address but it was not accepted but his 'snail mail' address is,

John D. McLaughlin

Phone: (314)-772-1349

You may want to contact him, as will I some how or other. I'm serviced by AOL, American OnLine which has been having their problems, if you've read the papers. So I'm never quite sure if or when I will be able to GET on line...I will have to admit it is getting a little better. If I can manage my day and get on my PC before 2 p.m., It is all right, but afterward, I get nothing but a busy signal. Guess it is the school children and office workers that start using the network on into midnight.

Once again, my thanks for your thoughtfulness. I will put your family group sheet on file and if someone contacts about your family, I'll send them onto you.

Sincerely,

Dear Vivian,

It's late on Sunday night, I've had a busy weekend, and I really should be getting some sleep. But I just have to write to tell you some of the things that I found at the library yesterday.

First of all, I looked up the 1880 Anderson Co. TN census with Philip Flanagan on it. I hadn't known about that and I was very interested to see what it said. When I saw that his parents were born in Pennsylvania, it made me think of something I had seen in one of your old letters. (No, I don't have some phenomenal memory--- I had gone back and read everything I had on Flanagan after finding Elizabeth McLaughlin.) Anyway, you quoted from History of Providence Presbyterian Church about John Flennekin, a signer of the Mecklenburg Declaration. Three Flennekin brothers arrived in Philadelphia from Ulster. James Flennekin had married Jean Glaspy (Jane Gillespie) and they had 9 children. John Flennekin, the signer, was born in Pennsylvania in 1744. Eventually the Flennikin family moved to Mecklenburg County. Granted, John Flennekin would have been about 60 years old when Philip was born, but the Pennsylvania birthplaces are another link to the Mecklenburg Flanagans.

As for the McLaughlin family: In Virgil White's Genealogical Abstracts of Revolutionary War Pension Files, there are 3 McLaughlin brothers, who all claim to have enlisted in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina(!). Two of them settled in Tazewell and Russell Counties, Virginia. In Russell County, VA, Personal Property and Land Tax List 1787 through 1800, 1802, 1810, John and Jacob "McGlaulin" first show up in 1802. On the 1850 census for Russell County, their widows Judith and Mary, respectively, are still living.

In John Vogt's Wythe County Marriages, Eli McLaughlin married Mary Wampler on 15 Aug 1802. As I told you in my last letter, "Ely McGlaughlin" was on the 1810 census in Wythe County, but he must have died before 1820. In 1820, Mary McLaughlin was in Wythe County with 1 female under 10, 1 female 10-16, 1 female 26-45 (there may be 1 female 16-26, but it's smudged). On the 1850 Russell County census Mary King is living in the household of Stephen E. Ratliff, 30, farmer, and Sevanna, 26, both born in Wythe County. Mary is 63, born in Wythe County. Sevanna may have been a daughter Mary had with her second husband, Jacob King.

There should be a Wampler family history somewhere. All those Wythe County families are very well documented. I ran out of time before I could look up anything on Wamplers. I never have enough time at the library.

You may have already found much of this yourself, but I wanted to let you know what I had found. The Cincinnati Library has nothing on the Flanagan name (not under any variation), and I found no sketches on the family in any of the Mecklenburg County books. Maybe you can find something. I'm eagerly awaiting your next letter!

Best wishes,

Diane

O'Ferrall's Linea Antiqua

90. Nial Naoighiallach, youngest and only son of Eochaidh by the second wife, as aforesaid, succeeded Criomthainn and was the 126th monarch ofIreland. Was a stout, wise and warlike prince and fortunate in all his conquests and achievements and therefore called great; He was also called Niall Naoighiallach, i.e., Nial of the Nine Hostages, from the hostages taken from the nine several counties by him subdued and made tributary, viz., Munster, Leinster, Connacht, Ulster, the Britons, the Picts, the Saxons and the Morini, a people of Gaul towards Calais and Picardy; From whence he marched with his victorious army of Irish Scots, Picts and Britons further into Gaul in order to the conquest thereof; and encamping at the River Loire, was treacherously slain as he sat by the riverside by Eochaidh, King of Leinster, in revenge of a former wrong by him received from the said Niall,A.D. 405. And in the 27th year of his reign St. Patrick was first brought into Ireland at the age of 16 years, amoung 200 children brought by the armyout of Little Brittany, called Armorica, in Gaul. He was the first that gave the name of Scotia Minor to Scotland and ordained it to be called so ever after, till then (and still by the Irish) called Albion.

91. Eoghan or Owen, one of the sons of the said Nial Mor, from whom the territory of Inis-Eoghan in Ulster was called, had eleven brothers, viz, Laoguire, the 128th Monarch of Ireland; in the 4th year of whose reign St.Patrick came into Ireland the second time to plant the Christian faith, A.D.432. 2) Conal Cremthainn, ancestor the the O'Melaghlin kings of Meath; 3) Conal Gulban, ancestor to the O'Donnells, Lords and Earls of the territory of Tirconnell in Ulster, so called from him; 4) Fiachu, from whom the from Birr to the Hill of Uisneach in Medio Hibernica (Meath) is called; Cinel Fiacha and from him MacGeoghegan, Lords of that territory; O'Molloey, O'Donechar, etc., derive their pedigree; 5) Maine, whose patrimony was all the tract of land from Loch Ree to Loch Annin, near Molingar, and whose descendants are Muinter Tagan, that is, Sionnach, now called Fox, Lords of that territory of Muinter Tagan; MacGawley of Cabry, O'Dugan and O'Mulchoney,the prime antiquaries of Ireland; 6) Cairbre, ancestor of O'Flannagan of Tuath-Ratha, Muinter Cathalan or Cahill; 7) Fergus, a quo Cinel Fergusa; 8) Enna 9) Aongus 10) Aulthearg and 11) Fergus Ailtleathan. Of the last four I find no issue; of the rest of them and their issue more in due place.

92. Muireadhach, son of Eoghan, had nine brothers, viz., 1) Ailill 2) Fergus 3) Felim 4) Eochaidh Binneach 5) Cormac 6) Aongus 7) Dallan 8) Iallaun and 9) Dechin; of which Fergus, ancestor to O'Conor of Magh-Ith; Eochaidh Binneach, a quo Cinel Binne in Scotland; and Felim, a quo O Dibhdiorma, more of which hereafter. The said Muireadach had many sons, but two especially by his married wife, Earca, daughter of Loarn, King of the Dal Riata in Scotland, Muirchertach Mor and Fergus Mor, both called Mac Earca, or the sons of Earca, their mother. Whether anymore of thesons was by the said Earca is not set down.

93. Muirchertach Mac Earca, eldest son of Muireadhach, foresaid, the 131st Monarch of Ireland, reigned 24 years and died naturally in his bed, which was rare amoung the Irish monarchs in those days, says Keating, but others contradict him and say he was burnt in a house after being drowned in wine (perhaps meaning he was drunk) on all-holantide Eve, A.D. 527. It was in the 20th year of his predacessor's reign that his brother Fergus Mor, with five more of his brothers, viz., Fergus Mor, two more named Loarn and two named Aongus, with a complete army went into Scotland to assist his grandfather King Loarn, much afflicted by his enemies the Picts; who in several battles and engagements, were vanquished and overcome by Fergus and his party; who prosecuted the war so vigorously and followed the enemy to their own homes and reduced them to between times from the nine several sandbags by him wounded and made tributary, viz., Munster, Lancaster, Connaught, Ulster, the Britons, the Picts, the Saxons and the Norsemen, a supply of equal numbers (Malia and Scotia). From whence he marched with his victorious army of twelve score, Picts and Britons, further into Gaul in order to the conquest thereof, and encamping on the River Loire, was therein by chance slain as he was out by the riverside by a stray ball, King of Leinster, in revenge of a foreset done by his receiving from Dermot Mac Murrough, King of the Lifi, part of his share of his share of St. Patrick's Grave, Armagh, and in the 12th year of his reign. Patrick was first Bishop Armagh, remained at the age of 12 years, during 120 months a captive by the swineherd of Dairy, Britain, called Gerritus, in Gaul. Patrick was first that gave the name of Scotia Minor to Scotland and declared it to be called so ever after, till then 'and' called by the Irish, Dalled Albion.

VI. Eugenius or Owen, one of the sons of the Nail Nial, from whom the Tyrconnell of Ania-Sogain in Ulster, was called, had eleven brothers, viz., Lugaidhe, the 12th Monarch of Ireland, in the 4th year of whose reign St. Patrick came into Ireland the second time to plant the Christian in ch. A.D. 432. Conn, remaining, on after the one O Neachtain Kings of Meath, Conal Gulbe, ancestor to the O'Donnells, Lords and Earls of Tyrconnell in Ulster, as called from him. Eugenius, from whom the Kings to the Milesian Monarch in Meath is called Conal Tyrone and Tyrconnell, Lords of that Barony. O'Moriley, O'Connaghan, etc., Native Chieftainry. St. Maine, whose patrimony was all the tract of land from Lough Lee to Lough Ennell, near Mullingar, and whose descendants are Multer Tuoy, that is, stronghorn, now called the Lords of that territory or Barony Tuoy. Moreover, i. Cahry, O Donan and O'Mulconary, the prime ancestors of Ireland. 6. Cathaoir, ancestor of O'Kavanagh of Tinnahinch, Queen's County. 7. Tuaigh, a quo O'Tuathaigh, Tuathe or Tighe in Leinster. 8. Mangus, ancestor of O'Mangan, Kings of Ulster, Mangus, a quo Mangus, Mac Mangus, Mac Mangus, Mac such extremity that they were glad to accept peace upon the conquerer's own conditions; whereupon the king's death, which happened about the same time, the said Fergus was unanimously elected or chosen as king, as being of the blood royal, by his mother; and the said Fergus, for a good and lucky omen, sent to his brother, then monarch of Ireland, for the marble chair called Liath-Fail or Cloch-na-cinnemhna, the latter importing in English "stone of destiny or fortune," to be crowned thereon; which fell out accordingly, for as he was the first absolute king of all Scotland of the Milesian race, so the succession contined in his blood and lineage ever since to this day as is partly hinted before and more fully shall appear in due place; this Muirchertach had four other brothers besides the six already named, viz., Forrach, ancestor to Mac Tathmaol Tigernach, a quo O Cunigan or Cunningham; Mongan, a quo O Croidhen and O Dunely; Dalagh, a quo O Daly and Moan or Maine.

Note: this is incorrect. The Fergus Mor who settled in Scotland was not the brother of Muirchertach Mac Earca. See pedigree of the Kings of Dal Riada. This error (also in Keating's History) apparantly arose because of confusion between Earca, the mother of Muirchertach Mac Earca and Eirc or Erc, the father of the Fergus Mor who settled in Scotland, by legend accompanied by his brothers Loarn and Aongus. Earca, the mother of Muirchertach, was the daughter of Loarn, brother of this Fergus Mor, son of Erc, King of the Dal Riada in Ireland.

94. Domhnall Ilchealgach, i.e., the deceitful, son of Muirchertach, the 134th Monarch of Ireland, reigned jointly with his brother Fergus, 3 years, and died of the plague, both in one day, A.D. 561. They had three other brothers, Boadan, the 137th Monarch of Ireland, Niall and Scanlan.

95. Aodh Uaridhrach, his son, the 143rd Monarch of Ireland, 7 years, slain in the battle of Atha-da-facla, A.D. 607. He had an older brother Eochu who was the 136th Monarch of Ireland and was slain by Cronan, King of Connacht, A.D. 563.

95. Maolfrithich, his son

96. Maoldoon, his son. Had a brother Maoltuide, a quo O'Maoltuly.

97. Fergal Mac Maolduin, his son, the 156th Monarch of Ireland, 10 years, slain in the battle of Allon by Moroch, King of Leinster, A.D. 718. He had a brother Adain, a quo the Dalyes of Leath-Cuinn.

98. Niall Frasach, i.e., of the showers, so called from three wonderful showers that fell in his time in three different places in Ireland. The first, a shower of honey, in Fathan-beg; the second, a shower of silver in Fathan-Mor; the third, a shower of blood in Magh-laghen. So says Keating, wherein other authors differ, who say the first shower was of silver, the second of honey and the third of wheat, and describe the miraculous occasion of the said showers as followeth: In that monarch's reign there was an extraordinary famine throughout all the kingdom and the king being one night at supper, with seven revered Bishops in his company, all the lights in the room accidentally expired and when new lights were brought the king perceived the table and dishes all bloody; and inquiring the cause thereof the Bishops ingeniously confessed that they being very hungry while they were in the dark, cut one another shouting who should have most of the meat, either to satisfy their present hunger or to put up and reserve for another time. Whereat the king, a just, pious and religious Prince, was moved with pity, considering what a sad condition the generality of the nation was in seeing the Rev. Prelates reduced to that extremity. Whereupon he immediately made a vow never to eat more until God in his infinite mercy were graciously pleased to deliver the people in their great distress. And thereupon desired the Prelates to join with him in fasting and prayer that the Lord would mercifully withdraw his wrath from the nation. And to that end they all went to the King's oratory, where they continued 24 hours. A messenger came to the King to tell him of a great shower of silver which had fallen in the fields of Fathan-beg; which, when the King heard he bemoaned that silver was of no avail to the poor people when victuals could not be had for it; and entreated the Bishops to continue their devotions, which, having done 24 hours more, news came to the King of a great shower of honey that dropped in the fields of Fathan-mor. Whereat the King bemoaned the second time saying that honey was of little avail as silver in regard that if the people in their hungry, starving condition did eat thereof they would swell up and die. And thereupon renewed their earnest supplications which they contined 24 hours longer. At the end thereof the King had notice that God was pleased to shower down a vast quantity of wheat in the fields of Magh-laighen, which the King ordered to be gathered up and distributed amoung the people of the whole nation and thereby relieved them from the famine. And the King in thankful acknowledgment of God's great mercy and favor wooed at that time, immediately, after his reign of 7 years, laid down his crown and kingdom to his next successor and retired into Scotland and exchanged his royal diadem and robes for a monk's cowle and habit in St. Columba's Monastery of Iona, A.D. 765; where he spent 8 years wholly devoting himself to works of piety and Christian repentence, being a great penitent, and dying a holy saint, A.D. 773. He was the 162nd Monarch of Ireland and had three brothers, Conor, ancestor of O'Cahan; Hugh Allan, a quo O'Brain and Colea, a quo Clan Colean.

99. Aodh Oirnidhe, son of Niall Frasach, the 164th Monarch of Ireland, after 25 years' reign, was slain in the battle of Fearta, A.D. 817. Others say he died a great penitent at a place called Athada-Fearta. He had four brothers, Colman, a quo Clan Colman; Fearchar, from whom are Clan Fearchar; Cuana, a quo Muitnir Clunbro and Muirchertach, a quo Clan Muriarty of Loch-Eanach. In his reign such prodigeous thunder and lightening happened that killed many men, women and children over all the kingdom and particularly in a nook of the country between Coreavaghan and the sea in Munster. 1010 persons were destroyed thereby and many other prodigies, the forerunner of the Danish invasion which soon after followed.

100. Niall Caille, so called after his death from the River Caillen, where he was drowned after 13 years' reign, A.D.

844, the 166th Monarch of Ireland. He fought many battles with the Danes and Norwegians, in most of which, although the Danes were wasted, yet continual supplies pouring into them made them very formidable. For this reason they and fortified Dublin and other strong places upon the sea banks. He had three brothers, Mailduin, a quo Siol Muldoon; Fogartach, quo Muintir Con-sidhe, or King; and Blathmac of Dubheana.

101. Aodh Finnlaith, i.e., hoary, son of Niall Caille, the 168th Monarch of Ireland, 16 years, in which time he fought and defeated the Danes in several battles and was worsted in others and died at Deom-Enesclaun, A.D.876. He had four brothers, Dubhiontagh (O'Dubhionnachta); Aongus,a quo Clanongusa; Flahertach, a quo O'Hualby and Brian Oge, a quo Clan Braoin of Magh-Ith. He married Maoilmuire, or Mary, daughter of Kenneth, son of Alpin, both kings of Scotland, by whom he had issue.

102. Niall Glundubh, i.e., black-knee, the 170th Monarch of I reland, for three years, had many conflicts with the Danes, wherein most commonly he had the better, at last making up a great army in order to besiege Dublin. A battle was fought between them wherein the Monarch lost his life, and after a great slaughter on both sides, his army routed, A.D. 917. From him the surname O'Neill or Clanna Neill took beginning. He had a brother Domnall, King of Aileach, ancestor to the familly of MacLochlin, some of whom were monarchs of Ireland.

Note: this is incorrect. The McLaughlins properly descend from Niall Glundubh rather than from his brother, Domnall.

103. Muirchertach na ccochall ceraiciann, i.e., of the leather cloaks; had two brothers, Conell and Maoilciaran but no issue from either that we find.

104.Domnall of Ardmacha, the 173rd Monarch of Ireland, after 24 years' reign, died at Ardmacha, A.D. 978. During his long reign we find but little progress by him made against the invading Danes, but wholely bent his arms against his subjects, preying, burning and slaughtering the Connacians, whether deservedly or not, I know not. But know it was no seasonable time for them to fall foul upon one and other while their common enemy was victoriously triumphing over them both.

105. Muirdaigh, the son of Domnall of Armagh;; had a younger brother Muirchertach, from whom descend the O'Neills, in later centuries Princes of Tyrone and Lords of Clanaboy.

106. Lochlan, the son of Muirdaigh. Of Lochlan, little is known, except that by legend he was the son of a Viking Princess, hence his name (Lochlan, i.e., Land of the Norsemen)

107. Ardgar MacLochlainn, son of Lochlan. Ardgar, the King of Aileach, died A.D. 1064. Was the first to assume the surname MacLochlainn (McLaughlin).

108. Domnall MacLochlainn, the King of Aileach and the 179th Monarch of Ireland, reigned jointly with Muirchertach O'Brien, the Kingof Munster, and alone, both before and after him, 35 years, most of which time was spent in bloody wars and

144. The 16th Monarch of Ireland. He found many laws in the Tara and Assemblies, in need of work, although the dames were wild, yet continual supplies poured into them while he was very formidable. For 11½ years, he ruled fortified Dublin and added strong towers upon the sea bank, in the full bloom of life. Maliavin, a pig-faced Partholon Fogartach, the Mighty Co-ordie, or King, was a Estimate of Ireland.

145. Ross Finnolach, i.e., Mossy, son of Fiall Cailte, the Irish Monarch of Ireland, 12 years, in which time he fought and defeated the Danes 20 several battles and was wounded in [illegible] and died at Aon-Each-Liath, A.D.879. He had four [illegible], Lobhtrach (O'Dubhchontrach), Aonghus, a quo Clan Aonghus, Flaherach, a quo O'Flaherty and Eagan Oge, a quo Clan Eagan of Eagan-Ire. He married Moirinnia, or Mary, daughter of Kenneth, son of Alpin, King of Scotland, by whom he had issue.

146. Niall Glundubh, i.e., Black-knee, the 17th Monarch of Ireland, for three years, had many conflicts with the Danes, wherein was commonly he had the better. At last marching in great army in order to besiege Dublin. A battle was fought between them wherein the Monarch lost his life, and after a great slaughter on both sides, his army routed, A.D. 919. Niall Glundubh, O'Neill or Clanna Neill was beginning, as but a broken Donnell, King of Ailech, descended to the family of Hy-Niall, some of whom were monarchs of Ireland.

Note: This is important. The Mac-Lochlainn property chosen from Niall Glundubh, because chan from his brother, Donnell

147. Muirchertach na Corbhait Cearnach, i.e., of the Tartar Cheeks, the two brother, Donell and Niall but no serve from a char that we find.

148. Donnal, of Aedh-na, the 17th Monarch of Ireland, after 14 years reign, died at Kilmacud, A.D. 978. During his long reign we find but little progress by him made against the invading Danes, but mostly bent his arms against his own, waging, burning and slaughtering the Connaughts, whether deservedly or not, I know not. But know it was no accomplishment for them to fall upon one and other while Ireland common enemy was victoriously triumphing over them both.

149. Murchadh, the son of Donnell of Aingeb, the a young Prince Murchadh, from which sprung the O'Neills, in later centuries, Princes of Tyrone and Lords of Clanaboy.

150. Donnan, the son of Muirchertach, or Lochlan, little is known, save that by legend he was the son of a viking Princess, hence his name (Lochlan, i.e., Land of the Norsemen).

151. Eochar Mac-Lochlainn, son of Lochlan, Aedhan, the King of Ailech, died A.D. 1004. Was the first to assume the surname Mac-Lochlainn (Mac-Loughlin).

152. Donnal Mac-Lochlainn, the King of Ailech and the 22nd Monarch of Ireland, reigned jointly with Murchertach O'Brian, the King of Munster, and alone, both before and after, 19 years, most of which time was spent in bloody wars and devastations between these two competitors, until at length they agreed to the old division of Leath Mugha (the south) and Leath Cuinn (the north) between them; and both ended their days penitently, Muirchertach a monk at Lismore, A.D. 1119 and Domnall in the Monastery of Columcille at Derry, now Londonderry, A.D. 1121.

109. Niall MacLochlainn, son of Domnall. The King of Aileach; had a brother, Conor. Died A.D. 1119; 28 years old.

110. Muirchertach MacLochlainn, his son, the King of Aileach and the 182nd and last save one Monarch of Ireland of the Milesian Irish. A warlike, victorious and fortunate Prince, brought all the provinces of Ireland under his subjugation, forced hostages from them and after 10 years' absolute reign, was by Donoch O'Carroll, King of Oirgialla or Oriell , slain in battle, A.D. 1166.

110. Domnall MacLochlainn, his son. King of Aileach and the Lord of the Cinel Eoghainn (Clann Owen); Slain at the battle of Caim Eirge in 1241 in presentday Londonderry Co. by the combined forces of the O'Neills, his kinsmen, and the O'Donnells. After which the O'Neills gained the supremacy of the north of Ireland and never again were challenged by the McLaughlins.

Kings of the Dal Riada of Ireland and Scotland

According to Irish legend, the three sons of Earc mac Eochaidh Muinreamhar, named Fergus Mor, Loarn and Aongus, settled in Scotland circa 505 A.D., where they established a colony of the Irish Dal Riada in Argyle. A later descendant of Fergus Mor named Cinaeda (Kenneth) Mac Alpin is said to have united the kingdoms of the Picts and Scots (Dal Riada) in Scotland. Cinaeda Mac Alpin's daughter, Maoilmuire, married Aodh Finnlaith of the Cinel Eoghainn in Ireland, from whom descended the McLaughlins, O'Neills, MacSweeneys, Maclachlans and other related septs in Ireland and Scotland. Most of the clans of Scotland claim descent from either Fergus Mor, Loarn or Aongus.

misdeeds between these two companions, until at length they agreed to the old division of land, Argyle the south, and McCoy the north, between them. And both, under the leadership of Colonel Alexander, MacDonald, Lord Lorne, Argyle's son, the ancestor of Columbia at Derry, Cow Lecomarry, A.D. 1231.

100. Hall McCoy (Hamish) son of Donald, the King of Kilmarnock was a hunter, Donald, died A.D. 1281, 78 years old.

101. Malcolm McCoy (Hamish) Mac Con, the King of Argyle and the Isles, was just above one year, at Dunaire on the N. Ocean Tiran. A warlike, ambitious and fortunate Prince, he sought all the territory of Isle of Man under his subjugation, gained possession from Eilean and after 10 years' absence again was by common consent, King of Cornwall or Orkney, Alain McCoy, Ruler, A.D. 1294.

102. Donald McCoy Mac Con, Lord of Argyle and the Isles of the Isle of Man, Eilean Gwen, Slain in the Battle of Glen Orchy in 1314 in friendly Lowland by the Mac Dougal Clan Forces of the Stewarts, his kinsmen, and the O'Donnellys. Also with the O'Neills defeated the Sassenach of the North of Ireland and never again were challenged by the Sassenach.

Kings of the Dal Riada of Ireland and Scotland

According to Irish legend, the three sons of Eair Mac Eochaidh, mac Eochaidh, mac Eochaidh, Joarn and Aiteada, settled in Scotland circa 503 B.C., where they established a colony of the Irish Dal Riada in Argyle. A lineal descendant of Fergus Mor named Conaill Gulbain, who died in 629 is said to have invaded the province of the Picts and seized Kintyre (Cantyre) in Scotland. Towards Mac Alpin's ancestor, Malcolm, Mariner Aedh, Flaithbertach of the Cenel Boanchan in Ireland. Firm was characteristic of Kenneth, Donald II, Macbeth, Duncan, Malcolm and other relative rulers in Ireland and Scotland. Most of the clans of Scotland claim descent from either Fergus Mor, Lord of Argyle.

Westmoreland Co., Pa.

DIED.--In the borough of Greensburgh at the residence of his Son Randal M'Laughlin, on Monday evening, 27th instant, Mr. Adam M'Laughlin.

The deceased was a native of Ireland, and was born in June, 1757. Consequently, at his death he was in his 85th year. He had lived upwards of 57 years in this country; near 40 of which were spent in Chester Co. Pa, and the remainder about 17 years in this county. Mr. M'Laughlin had been engaged for many years, in the honorable and useful business of instructing youth; he was a man of very strong mind, of wonderful memory, and was, in a preeminent degree acquainted with the Holy Scriptures.

He had been a member, in full communion with the Seceder Church, but in his last days felt and regretted that he had been too negligent of religious duties. However, for many years before his death, he was constant and regular in the observance of private prayer and reading the Holy Scriptures. During the last year of his life, his mind was exceedingly weak, except for a few days before he died; when he was favored with a return of mental strength. At this time he was fully aware of his situation and had no expectation, but that he would soon exchange worlds. He was observed to be much engaged in prayer; the precious things lodged in his memory in former days, returned in vividness to his thoughts; he recognized the plan of Salvation, through the Lord Jesus Christ, and when exhorted by a minister of the gospel to confess all his sins to God, apply to the blood of Christ and trust in the Lord Jesus, alone, he said with energy, "I do," "I do." He expressed great thankfulness for religious instruction, and though deeply sensible of sin yet he left to his friends a pleasing hope that he repaired to the Lord Jesus and was accepted in Him. Thus, after receiving most kind and assiduous attention from a Son and a son's family, he died, at the close of the day, after a long life, without a struggle or a groan!--Communicated.

The McLaughlins of Donegal

The McLaughlins of Cinel Eoghainn are descended from Aodh Finnlaith, the Irish Ard Ri or High King who died in 876 A.D. From Aodh Finnlaith's son, Niall Glundubh, descend both the McLaughlins and the O'Neills, their kinsmen and rivals for the kingship of Aileach, the leading dynasty of the north of Ireland. Seated in Inishowen in Tirconnell (Donegal) the McLaughlins were direct descendants of Niall Mor or Niall 'of the Nine Hostages,' the great High King of Ireland who by legend was slain in 405 A.D. on a military expedition to the banks of the Loire in Gaul.

Niall 'of the Nine Hostages,' so named for hostages taken from the two kingdoms of Munster, Leinster, Connacht, the Ulaid, the Britons, the Picts, the Saxons and the Morini, a people of Gaul, was the founder of the Ui Neill (descendants of Niall) dynasties of the midlands and the north of Ireland. Sometime before his death in 405 A.D., Niall's three sons, Eoghan, Eanna and Conal Gulban founded kingdoms in the north of Ireland, a territory formerly ruled by the Ulaid, who gave their name to the province of Ulster. Descendants of these three sons of Niall are described as the northern Ui Neill in contradistinction to the descendants of the other sons of Niall who remained in the midlands, the southern Ui Neill.

From Eoghan descended the Cinel Eoghainn (progeny of Owen), of which the McLaughlins and the O'Neills were the ruling dynasty. From his brother Conal Bulban descended the Cinel Chonaill of Tirconnell, of which in later centuries the O'Donnells wee the chief representatives. From Eanna, the third brother, descended the Cinel Eanna, Kings of Magh Ith, Tir Eanna and Fanad in presentday Co. Donegal until dispossessed of their territories by the expansion of the Cinel Chonaill septs in the 12th century. Eoghan, for whom the Inishowen peninsula in Co. Donegal is named (Inis-Eoghainn or the Island of Owen), established his kingdom centered at the Grianan of Aileach, an ancient hill-fort by legend said to have been a fortress of the Tuatha de Danann kings of Ireland, the mythical precursors to the Milesian invaders of Ireland. Tir-Eoghainn, now Tyrone, also received its name from this son of Nial (Country of Owen).

For over 700 years the kings of Aileach ruled the north of Ireland from this fortress situated in the southern part of the Inishowen peninsula in Co. Donegal between Loughs Swilly and Foyle, until its destruction in 1101 by Muirchertach O'Brien, the King of Munster, in retalliation for the destruction of the palace of Kincora in 1088 by Domnall MacLochlainn, the High King of Ireland. After the destruction of the Grianan of Aileach, the McLaughlins are said to have first removed to Inish Ennigh in the Parish of Urney in Tyrone County, but later maintained their great house in the nearby Island of Derry, a religious center. Their kinsmen and rivals for the kingship of Aileach, the O'Neills, were seated at Tullyhoge near Dungannon in Tyrone County, the traditional inauguration site of the kings of Aileach.

After the death of Aodh Finnlaith in 876 A.D., three dynasties emerged from amoung his descendants to contend for the kingship of Aileach, which is occasionally described as "an Fochla" or the north of Ireland by the annalists. Independant of but subject to the kings of Aileach were the Oirghialla (kingdom of Oriel) and the Ulaid (kingdom of Ulidia).

Two of these dynasties, the McLaughlins and the O'Neills, were descendants of Niall Glundubh (black-knee), the elder son of Aodh Finnlaith. The third were descendants of Domnall, the younger

The Mac Laughlins of Cinel Eogain are descended from Aodh Finnliath, the Irish Ard Ri or High King who died in 879 A.D. From Aodh Finnliath's son, Niall Glundubh, descend both the Mac Laughlins and the O'Neills, their kinsmen and rivals for the kingship of Ailech, the leading dynasty of the north of Ireland. Seated in Inishowen in Donegal, the Mac Laughlins were direct descendants of Niall Mor or Niall 'of the Nine Hostages,' the great High King of Ireland who by legend was slain in 405 A.D. on a military expedition to the banks of the Loire in Gaul.

Niall 'of the Nine Hostages,' so named for hostages taken from the two kingdoms of Munster, Leinster, Connacht, the Uladh, the Britons, the Picts, the Saxons and the Morini, a people of Gaul, was the founder of the Ui Neill (descendants of Niall) dynasties of the midlands and the north of Ireland. Sometime before his death in 405 A.D., Niall's three sons, Fergus, Eogan and Conal Gulban founded kingdoms in the north of Ireland, a territory formerly ruled by the Uladh, who gave their name to the province of Ulster. Descendants of these three sons of Niall are described as the northern Ui Neill in contradistinction to the descendants of the other sons of Niall who remained in the midlands, the southern Ui Neill.

From Eogan descended the Cinel Eogain (progeny of Owen), of which the Mac Laughlins and the O'Neills were the ruling dynasty. From his brother Conal Gulban descended the Cinel Conaill or Tirconnell, of which in later centuries the O'Donnells were the chief representative. From Eanna, the third brother, descended the Cinel Eanna, Kings of Magh Ith, Tir Eanna and Tirana in present-day Co. Donegal until dispossessed of their territories by the expansion of the Cinel Conaill sept in the 12th century. Eogan, for whom the Inishowen peninsula in Co. Donegal is named (Inis-Eogainn or the Island of Owen), established his kingdom centered at the Grianan of Ailech, an ancient hill-fort. It is legend said to have been a fortress of the Tuatha de Danann kings of Ireland, the mythical predecessors to the Milesian invaders of Ireland. The Eogainn, now Tyrone, also received its name from this son of Niall (Country of Owen).

For over 700 years the kings of Ailech ruled the north of Ireland from this fortress situated in the southern part of the Inishowen peninsula in Co. Donegal between Loughs Swilly and Foyle, until its destruction in 1101 by Muirchertach O'Brien, the King of Munster, in retaliation for the destruction of the palace of Kincora in 1088 by Domnall MacLochlainn, the High King of Ireland. After the destruction of the Grianan of Ailech, the Mac Laughlins are said to have first removed to Lough Swilly in the Parish of Tawny in Tyrone County, but later maintained their great house in the nearby Island of Derry, a religious center. Their kinsmen and rivals for the kingship of Ailech, the O'Neills, were seated at Tullyhogue near Dungannon in Tyrone County, the traditional inauguration site of the Kings of Ailech.

After the death of Aodh Finnliath in 879 A.D., three dynasties emerged from among his descendants to contend for the kingship of Ailech, which is occasionally described as "an Eochaid," or the north of Ireland by the annalists. Independent of but subject to the Kings of Ailech were the Oirghialla (kingdom of Oriel) and the Uladh (kingdom of Ulidia).

Two of these dynasties, the Mac Laughlins and the O'Neills, were descendants of Niall Glundubh (black-knee), the elder son of Aodh Finnliath. The third were descendants of Donnell, the younger half-brother of Niall Glundubh. According to the Ban-Shenchus (the History of Women) Maoilmuire, the daughter of Cinaedh macAlpin, the King of Scotland, was the mother of Niall Glundubh. Gormlaith, the daughter of Eochu, the king of the Ulaid, was the mother of Domnall, the younger brother. Both brothers were Kings of Aileach. Domnall, dying first in 915, was succeeded by his half-brother Niall, who also held the Kingship of Ireland from 916 until his death three years later fighting the Danes at the Battle of Dublin in 919.

At first the succession to the kingship of Aileach alternated between the descendants of Aodh Finnlaith. Fergal, the son of Domnall, slain in 938, was King of Aileach, as was Aodh, the great-grandson of Domnall, slain in 994. This dynastic line reached its pinnacle with the reigns of Niall and Lochlan, both sons of Maelsechlainn and Kings of Aileach. After the death in 1068 of Domnall 'of the Poor,' Niall's son, at the hands of his brother Aodh, who succeeded him, this line was thereafter excluded from the kingship of Aileach by the descendants of Niall Glundubh.

Muirchertach 'of the leather cloaks,' the son of Niall Glundubh, was King of Aileach, as was his son, Domnall Ua Neill, styled 'of Armagh' by the annalists. Like his grandfather, Domnall Ua Neill was also the High King of Ireland. Domnall had four sons, the eldest of whom, Aodh, held the kingship of Aileach at his death in 1004. From his brothers Muirdaigh and Muirchertach descended the rival families of McLaughlin and O'Neill, who after 1083 monopolised the kingship of Aileach.

Despite the common description of the family as the "oldest traceable family in Europe," neither the McLaughlins nor the O'Neills are fully traceable in the Annals of Ireland. Muirdaigh, the son of Domnall 'of Armagh,' does not appear in the Annals. Nor does his son Lochlan, the eponymous founder of the McLaughlin sept. Their names appear only in the traditional genealogies of the Cinel Eoghainn. Muirchertach, the third son of Domnall 'of Armagh,' appears in the Annals but only his death is recorded in 977 A.D. His son Flaithbertach an Trostainn or 'of the Pilgrim's Staff,' so named for a pilgrimmage he took to Rome in 1030, was the King of Aileach, as was his son, Aodh Athlaman Ua Neill, from whom the O'Neills descend (+1033). Henceforward the O'Neill line is excluded from the kingship of Aileach and ignored by the annalists until the death of Muirchertach Ua Neill in 1160 A.D.

From the reign of Ardgar MacLochlainn (+1064), the son of Lochlan, as King of Aileach until Aodh Ua Neill (+1177) managed to regain the leadership of the Cinel Eoghainn, the royal line of the McLaughlins maintained sole possession of the coveted kingship of Aileach. Ardgar MacLochlainn's son was Domnall MacLochlainn, the King of Aileach and the High King of Ireland, who reigned despite the opposition of Muirchertach O'Brien, the King of Munster and a rival claimant for the throne, by some considered a joint High King. In 1088 Domnall MacLochlainn led an army of the north of Ireland into Munster, ravaged the countryside and destroyed the royal palace of the O'Brien kings at Kincora in Co. Clare. Thirteen years later he was repaid for this insult when Muirchertach O'Brien marched into Tirconnell and sacked the fortress of Aileach. Legend states Muirchertach ordered each of his men to carry a stone from the demolished Grianan of Aileach back to Limerick in a sack.

> "I never heard of the billeting of grit stones
> Though I heard of the billeting of companies, > until the stones of Aileach were billeted
> on the horses of the King of the West."
> Annals of the Kingdom of Ireland

the Foundation of Niall Glúndubh. According to the Ban-Seanchus (the History of Women) Mac Iúnaire, the daughter of Cinaedh mac Alpin, the King of Scotland, was the mother of Niall Glúndubh. Conaireach, the daughter of Fodan, the Prince of the Uíná, was the mother of Donnacht, the younger brother. Both brothers were Kings of Ailech. Donnacht, dying first in 915, was succeeded by his half-brother Niall, who also held the Kingship of Ireland from 916 until his death three years later fighting the Danes at the Battle of Dublin in 919.

At first the succession to the kingship of Ailech alternated between the descendants of Aodh Finnliath. Fergus, the son of Donnacht, died in 938, was King of Ailech, as was Aodh, the great grandson of Donnacht, later in 994. This dynastic line reached its pinnacle with the reigns of Niall and Lochlann, both sons of Maelseachlann and Kings of Ailech. After the death in 1083 of Donnacht 'of the Poor', Niall's son, as the heads of his brother Aodh, who succeeded him, this line was thereafter excluded from the kingship of Ailech by the descendants of Niall Glúndubh.

Muirchertach 'of the leather cloaks', the son of Niall Glúndubh, was King of Ailech, as was his son, Donnchadh Ua Neill, ancestor of Armagh by his concubine. Like his grandfather, Donnchadh Ua Neill was also the High King of Ireland. Donnchadh had four sons, the eldest of whom, Aodh, held the kingship of Ailech at his death in 1001. From his brothers Muirchertach and Muirchertach descended the rival families of Mac Lochlainn and O'Neill, who after 1083 monopolised the kingship of Ailech.

Despite the common description of the family as the "oldest traceable family in Europe," neither the Mac Lochlainns nor the O'Neills are fully traceable in the Annals of Ireland. Aindadach, the son of Donnchadh 'of Armagh', does appear in the Annals. His son Lochlann, the eponymous founder of the Mac Lochlainn sept. Their names appear only in the traditional genealogies of the Cinel Eogháin. Muirchertach, the third son of Donnchadh 'of Armagh', appears in the Annals but only his death is recorded in 977 A.D. His son Flaithbertach, an Irishman of 'of the Princes Sept' as named by a migrant-age he took to Rome in 1029, was the King of Ailech, as was his son, Aodh Athlaman Ua Neill, from whom the O'Neills descend (+1021). Thereafter, the O'Neill line is excluded from the kingship of Ailech and ignored by the annalists until the death of Muirchertach Ua Néill in 1160 A.D.

From the reign of Aedgar Mac Lochlainn (+1064), the son of Lochlann, as King of Ailech until Aodh Ua Neill (+1177) managed to regain the leadership of the Cinel Eogháin, the royal line of the Mac Lochlainns maintained sole possession of the coveted kingship of Ailech. Aedgar Mac Lochlainn's son was Domnall Mac Lochlainn, the King of Ailech and the High King of Ireland, who reigned despite the opposition of Muirchertach O'Briain, the King of Munster and a rival claimant for the throne, by some considered a joint High King. In 1083 Domnall Mac Lochlainn led an army of the north of Ireland into Munster, ravaged the countryside and destroyed the royal palace of the O'Briain Kings at Kincora in Co. Clare. Thirteen years later he was joined for this march when Muirchertach O'Briain marched into Tirconnell and sacked the fortress of Ailech. Legend tells Muirchertach ordered each of his men to carry a stone from the demolished fastness of Ailech back to Limerick in a sack.

"I never heard of the building of grit stones
Though I heard of the building of compacts, until the stones of Ailech were hilated
on the horses of the King of the West."

Annals of the Kingdom of Ireland

Domnall MacLochlainn, the Annals record, "died at Doire-Choluim-Cille (Derry) affter having been twenty-seven years in sovereignty over Ireland, and eleven years in the Kingdom of Aileach, in the seventy-third year of his age, on the night of Wednesday, the fourth of the Ides of February, being the festival of Mochuarog, 1121 A.D."

His son, Niall MacLochlainn, the royal heir of Aileach, was slain by the Cinel Moain of Magh Ith at 28 years of age. His son Muirchertach MacLochlainn was the last McLaughlin High King of Ireland and according to the annalists, the "last, save one, Monarch of the Irish Milesian race," a reference to the arrival of the Norman-English barons in Ireland in 1171 under Strongbow, an event which effectively ended the Irish High Kingship of the island. Like his grandfather, Muirchertach reigned with opposition from a rival claimant to the Monarchy, this time from Ruaidhri (Rory) O'Connor, the King of Connacht. He suffered quite a different fate than his distinguished ancestor, Domnall. In 1156 Muirchertach MacLochlainn attended the consecration of Millifont Church, gifting the clergy with 120 cows and 60 ounces of gold. In 1162 he led a hosting of the north of Ireland to Magh-Fitharte, where he spent a week burning the corn and the towns of the foreigners (English). In 1164 he aided in the building of Derry Church. In 1166 he slew Aodh O'Mulfoyle, the King of Carrickabraghy and blinded Eochaidh MacDunleby O'Haughey, the King of Ulaid, in violation of sanctuary offered by the church and Donnchadh O'Carroll, the King of Oriel. In retalliation for this outrage against the church, O'Carroll led an uprising of the subject kingdoms of Aileach against Muirchertach MacLochlainn. Because of his treachery in blinding O'Haughey, Muirchertach was abandoned by his sept, "save a few," the Annals relate, and was slain by Donnchadh O'Carroll along with thirteen members of his party. He was buried in Armagh "to the dishonor of the Derry community in being carried away from the cemetery, 1166 A.D."

Soon after his death Ruaidhri O'Connor, who succeeded him as unopposed High King of Ireland, gathered around him the chieftains of Ireland to discuss, amoung other topics, the control of tribes and their territories in Ireland. The outrages of the recently slain Muirchertach MacLochlainn must have figured heavily in their discussions, because after this meeting in 1167 Ruaidhri O'Connor led an army into Tir-Eoghainn and partitioned the Kingdom of Aileach between the McLaughlins and the O'Neills. According to the Four Masters, that part of the kingdom north of the mountain Calainn he gave to Niall MacLochlainn in eschange for two hostages. That part of the kingdom south of the same mountain he gave to Aodh Ua Neill, again in exchange for two hostages. The once great Kingdom of Aileach was now divided into two smaller kingdoms, that of Aileach, much reduced in size and held by the McLaughlins and that of Tyrone, held by the O'Neills.

This act of Ruaidhri O'Connor's, obviously intended to weaken the power of the dominant McLaughlin dynasty of the Cinel Eoghainn, revived the nearly dormant claims of the O'Neill branch of the family to leadership within the Cinel Eoghainn, although there were indications that the dynastic rivalry between them had been rekindled a few years before Ruaidhri O'Connor's partition of their territory. In 1160 Muirchertach Ua Neill was slain by Lochlan Ua Lochlainn, who was in turn slain by Muirchertach's son, Aodh. This Aodh Ua Neill was briefly Lord of the Cinel Eoghainn and is accorded by the annalists at his death the titles of both King of Aileach and Lord of Tyrone. He was slain in 1177 by Maoilseachlainn MacLochlainn and his son, Ardgal.

After Aodh Ua Neill's death at the hands of the McLaughlins, the struggle for supremacy between the McLaughlins, Kings of Aileach, and the O'Neills, newly-erected Lords of Tyrone, was for the leadership of the entire Cinel Eoghainn rather than for a specific kingdom. In 1186 the Annals of Ulster state there was a "great disturbance in the north this year." In that year Domnall MacLochlainn, Lord of the Cinel Eoghainn, was deposed by the nobles of the Cinel Eoghainn in favor

Domnall Mór ó Néill, the Annals record, "died at Daire-Calgaigh Cille (Derry) after having been twenty-seven years in sovereignty over Ireland, and eleven years in the Kingdom of Ailech; in the seventy-third year of his age, on the night of Wednesday, the fourth of the Ides of January, being the festival of Mochaomhóg, 1121 A.D."

His son, Niall Mór ó Néill, eldest son of the royal house of Ailech, was slain by the Cinéal Moáin of Mag Ith in 28 years of age. His son Muircheartach Mór ó Néill was the last Mac Lochlainn High King of Ireland and according to the annals the "last, save one, Monarch of the Irish Nation." A reference to the arrival of the Norman-English barons in Ireland in 1171 under Strongbow, an event which effectively ended the Irish High Kingship of the island. Like his grandfather, Muircheartach regained with opposition from a rival claimant to the throne, this time from Ruaidhrí (Rory) O'Connor, the King of Connacht. He suffered once a defeat at the hands of his distinguished ancestor Lochlann in 1156 Muircheartach had defeated Lochlann at Ardee on the consecration of Mellifont Church, giving the clergy with 120 cows and 20 ounces of gold in 1142. In fact a meeting of the north of Ireland to Mag-Linchi which lasted for seven a week, burning the corn and the towns of the foreigners (English). In 1164 he aided in the building of Derry Church. In 1166 he slew Aodh O'Malloghy, the King of Cenél-Eóghain, and Muircheartach Bocchaldach MacDonnchadh, the King of Uíbh Néill, in violation of sanctuary offered by the church and Donnchadh O'Carroll, the King of Oriel. In revenge for the murder of Aodh, O'Carroll led an uprising of the subject kingdoms of Ailech against Muircheartach Mac Lochlainn. Because of his treachery in blinding O'Malloghy, Muircheartach was abandoned by his men, "save a few," the Annals relate, and was slain by Donnchadh O'Carroll along with thirteen members of his party. He was buried in Armagh "to the disgust of the Derry community in being carried away from the community, 1166 A.D."

Soon after his death Ruaidhrí O'Connor, who succeeded him as unopposed High King of Ireland, gathered around him the chieftains of Ireland to Tarasc, assuming rather tepid, the control of tribes and their territories in Ireland. The outrages of the recently slain Muircheartach Mac Lochlainn must have figured heavily in their discussions, because after this meeting in 1167 Ruaidhrí O'Connor led an army into the Kingdoms and renounced the Kingdom of Ailech between the Mac Lochlainns and the O'Néills. According to the Four Masters, that part of the kingdom north of the mountain Eilaine he gave to Niall Mac Lochlainn, in exchange for two hostages. That part of the kingdom south of the same mountain he gave to Aodh Ua Néill, again in exchange for two hostages. The more great Kingdom of Ailech was now divided into two smaller kingdoms, that of Aileach, much reduced in size and held by the Mac Lochlainns and that of Tyrone, held by the O'Néills.

This act of Ruaidhrí O'Connor's, obviously intended to weaken the power of the dominant Mac Lochlainn dynasty of the Cinéal Eóghain, revived the nearly dormant claims of the O'Néill branch of the family to leadership within the Cinéal Eóghain, although there were indications that the dynastic rivalry between them had been reduced a few years before Ruaidhrí O'Connor's partition of their territory. In 1100 Muircheartach Ua Néill was slain by Lochlann Ua Lochlainn, who was in turn slain by Muircheartach's son, Aodh. This Aodh Ua Néill was briefly lord of the Cinéal Eóghain and is recorded by the annalists at his death the titles of Lord King of Ailech and Lord of Tyrone. He was slain in 1177 by Muircheartach Mac Lochlainn and his son, Aodhgal.

After Aodh Ua Néill's death at the hands of the Mac Lochlainns, the struggle for supremacy between the Mac Lochlainns, Kings of Ailech, and the O'Néills, newly-created Lords of Tyrone, was for the leadership of the entire Cinéal Eóghain rather than for a specific kingdom. In 1185 the Annals of Ulster state there was a "great disturbance in the north this year." In that year Domnall Mac Lochlainn, Lord of the Cinéal Eóghain, was deposed by the nobles of the Cinéal Eóghain in favor of Ruaidhri Ua Flaithbertach, a compromise candidate acceptable to all sides. Ruaidhri was soon slain in battle, however, ending the breif respite in hostilites between the warring McLaughlins and O'Neills. The following years, from 1187 to 1197, witnessed a succession of McLaughlin chieftains of the Cinel Eoghainn. But in 1199 Aodh Ua Neill, the son of the Aodh Ua Neill slain in 1177, is mentioned as leading a hosting of the Cinel Eoghainn as their leader. He wad deposed in 1201 by the nobles of the Cinel Eoghainn and Conchobar (Connor) MacLochlainn was crowned Lord of the Cinel Eoghainn in his place.

Conchobar was soon slain in battle and in 1202 Magnus MacLochlainn, the son of Diarmat, was slain by Muirchertach Ua Neill, who also fell in the same battle. In 1204 Diarmat MacLochlainn joine forced with an army of the Norman-English and led a foray into the O'Neill territory of Tyrone, then plundered the church of Cholium-Cille (St. Collumcille) in Derry and was slain. In 1209 Aodh Ua Neill was again named Lord of the Cinel Eoghainn and in 1215, the King of Aileach as well as the Lord of Tyrone. After his death in 1230 the leadership of the Cinel Eoghainn was contested bitterly by the two rival families.

In 1230 Domnall MacLochlainn, the son of Muirchertach (described in the Annals as the "destroyer of the cities and castles of the English") is recorded as Lord of the Cinel Eoghainn. In that year he made an alliance with the Norman-English and led a hosting of the "foreigners" into Tirconnell. In 1234 he slew Domnall Ua Neill, the son of Aodh. In 1237 Domnall was deposed as Lord of the Cinel Eoghainn by the same "foreigners," but a year later regained the Lordship after the Battle of Carn-Siadhail, in which he routed the O'Neill forces and slew Domnall Ua Neill of Tamnach and Magh Mathgamna. In 1239 Mac Maurice, the Norman Lord Justice of Ireland and Hugo De Lacy, the Norman Earl of Ulster, marched into Tyrone with an army, deposed Domnall MacLochlainn and awarded the Lordship of the Cinel Eoghainn to Brian O'Neill. A battle was fought between the rival claimants later that year at Carnteel, after which Domnall MacLochlainn resumed the Lordship, but the Annals add, "was deprived of it without delay." In 1241 Domnall MacLochlainn again managed to expell Brian O'Neill from the Lordship of the Cinel Eoghainn.

Then the Annals tersely relate, Brian O'Neill went to Maoilseachlainn O'Donnell, and O'Donnell with his force went with Ua Neill into Tyrone and they gave battle to Domnall MacLochlainn in the Battle of Caim Eirge, in which Domnall MacLochlainn and ten members of his family were slain along with all of the chieftains of the Cinel Eoghainn. Brian O'Neill was then installed as Lord of the Cinel Eoghainn and the McLaughlins, for centuries Kings of Aileach and High Kings of Ireland, never again challenged the O'Neills for supremacy within the Cinel Eoghainn.

Just six years later, in 1247, the O'Donnells appear for the first time in the Annals as "Lords of Inishowen," a teritory which included most of the partitioned Kingdom of Aileach held by the vanquished McLaughlins. The Inishowen peninsula had long been the prized possession of the Kings of Aileach, a fertile land rich in livestock and fishings, the ancestral patrimony of Eoghan, the son of Niall 'of the Nine Hostages.' One of the free chieftainships of Aileach, populated exclusively by Cinel Eoghainn septs and subdivided into two subkingdoms, An Breadhach, ruled by the O'Duidhiormas, and Carraig Brachaidhe, ruled by the O'Maolfabhails, the Inishowen peninsula had long been coveted by the expansion-minded O'Donnell Kings of Tirconnell and there is some evidence to indicate they temporarily won control of the peninsula after the death of the powerful Domnall MacLochlainn in 1121. In 1152 the Synod of Kells was held and it was decided to establish 36 dioceses in Ireland based on the political divisions existing at the time. The Inishowen peninsula was included with the rest of the Clann Chonaill possessions in the newly-formed Diocese of Raphoe, indicating the O'Donnells were in possession of the peninsula at that date. It was later transferred back to the Derry

Diocese in 1261 under the influence of the O'Neills.

At the time of the Synod, however, the Kingdom of Aileach had yet to be partitioned and the McLaughlins, although seated at Derry, were Lords of the entire north of Ireland, leaving control of the peninsula to their sublords, the O'Duidhiormas and the O'Maoilfabhails. After the partition of the Kingdom of Aileach, however, their territory was restricted primarily to that part of the kingdom which lay within the bounds of the Inishowen peninsula. After their defeat at the Battle of Caim Eirge, the Kingdom of Aileach was dissolved as were the subkingdoms of Carraig Brachaidh and An Breadhach. The O'Donnells immediately lay claim to the peninsula as their "sword land" and usurped the title of "Lord of Inishowen" from the resident Cinel Eoghainn septs.

This claim of the O'Donnells to the Inishowen peninsula, recognised by the annalists at the death of Maoilseachlainn O'Donnell in 1247, was curiously unopposed by the victorious O'Neill chieftains of the Cinel Eoghainn until years later, although the annals of succeeding centuries are rife with their later attempts to reclaim the peninsula from the O'Donnells. There is no documentary proof but it appears as though Brian O'Neill at his meeting with Maoilseachlainn O'Donnell in 1241 prior to the Battle of Caim Eirge bartered away the Cinel Eoghainn's traditional claims to this territory in exchange for O'Donnell's assistance in crushing their rivals the McLaughlins, who had once gain won the upper in their dynastic struggle.

In 1543 the O'Donnells and the O'Neills presented their opposing claims to the Inishowen peninsula to the English authorites. In the decision handed down, Magnus O'Donnell was awarded the peninsula over the claims of Conn O'Neill, in the |wording of the State Papers, "because O'Donell before the Lord Deputy and Council exhibited divers writings, confirmations or releases of that lordship made by the Earl's ancestor his his ancestors." No specifics are given concerning the "divers writings" of Magnus O'Donnell's, so we can never be precisely sure when the O'Neills granted the Inishowen peninsula to the O'Donnells. It appears certain, however, that Brian O'Neill and Maoilseachlainn O'Donnell reached an agreement of some kind concerning the disposition of the McLaughlin's territory in Tirconnell prior to the Battle of Caim Eirge.

After the Battle of Caim Eirge, the McLaughlins, bearing their royal dead, are said to have retreated for safety into the most northern reaches of the Inishowen peninsula. The family, not terribly numerous, was neary destroyed in the battle, which appears to have been the intent of the O'Neills and the O'Donnells, both of whom stood to gain immensely by their defeat.Ten of Domnall MaclOchlainn's immediate family were slain along with all of the chieftains of the Cinel Eoghainn. This number probably included most of the adult McLaughlin males capable of bearing arms, including Murchadh or Moroch, Domnall's only son. If the traditional genealogies of O'Clery's Book of Genealogies are correct - and there is little reason to doubt them - all of the McLaughlin descendants of this sept living today are descended from Domnall MacLochlainn, the King of Aileach and Lord of the Cinel Eoghainn, through the line of his son, Murchadh.

In 1260 the O'Donnell claims to the Inishowen peninsula were brushed aside by the Norman De Burgo family of Munster, who recently had been appointed Earls of Ulster after the English title had lain vacant for several years. In that year the De Burgos marched into Tirconnell in force and occupied the Inishowen peninsula. In 1305 they completed the Castle of Northburg (now Greencastle) on the Foyle shore. In an attempt to protect their holdings from the Irish chieftains of Tirconnell and Tyrone, the De Burgos set up a line of fortifications running across the southern part of the Inishowen peninsula from the City of Derry to Lough Swilly. In 1310 they obtained from Geoffrey MacLochlainn, then Bishop of Derry, grants of church lands needed to complete their fortifications.

In 1330, following a family squabble, the De Burgos suddenly withdrew from the Inishowen peninsula after an occupation of over seventy years, leaving a political vacuum in the area. Into this political vacuum stepped the O'Doghertys of Clan Fianhainn, kinsmen to the O'Donnells. The McLaughlins, nearly destroyed as a sept in the butchery of Caim Eirge nearly a century before, must have watched helplessly as the Cinel Chonaill forces swept into the peninsula in the wake of the Norman withdrawall. ;Without the support of the Cinel Eoghainn chieftains, at this date loyual only to the O'Neills, the McLaughlins were unable to resist the advance of the O'Doghertys into their territory.

The O'Doghertys had formerly been Lords of the kingdom of Ard Miodhair in central Donegal, but over the centuries had expanded their original holdings by annexing the kingdoms of Magh Ith and Tir Eanna, the latter bordering the Inishowen peninsula to the south. Following the De Burgo withdrawall from Tirconnell, the O'Doghertys as subject chieftains of the ruling O'Donnells moved quickly into the peninsula and within a few years established their overlordship of the territory. In 1342, commenting on the death of Domnall O Dochartaigh, the Annals of Ulster state: "and it is not this alone, for there was little wanting from his having the Lordship of Inish-Eoghain and the Lordship of the Cantred of Tir-hEnna as well ...."

The O'Doghertys are first named "Lords of Inishowen in the more conservative Annals of the Kingdom of Ireland in 1413 and the peninsula thereafter became known as "O'Dogherty's Country" and is referred to as such in all state documents of the 16th and 17th centuries. That O'Dougherty probably was awarded theInishowen peninsula by the O'Donnells as a means of protecting their claims to the territory is revealed in a boast made by Hugh roe O'Donnell to the English in 1596: "O Dochartie hath no lands but what O'Donnell doth give him in Tirconnell. Neither had his predacessors any lands there but such as they held of O'Donnell's ancestors."

Thus fell the McLaughlins of noble Clan Owen
Kings of Aileach
and Monarchs of Eire;
Deprived of a kingdom
through the fortunes of battle and the schemes of their rivals;
Trapped between swords
Red ran their blood on the hills of Caim Eirge.

Although the McLaughlins, in the words of O'Donovan, had been "reduced to obscurity" by the O'Neills, the O'Donnells and the O'Doghertys. they still retained large tracts of land near Derry and on the Foyle shore in Moville Parish as their traditional sept landholdings. It is probable that most of these landholdings were subsequently converted into church or herenagh lands, safe from despoliation in times of war, a frequent occurance in the Inishowen peninsula as the O'Donnells and the O'Neills quarrelled over its ownership.

In English inquisitions taken at Derry and Lifford in 1609 the McLaughlins appear as herenaghs or lay officials of church or monastery land in the Parishes of Clonca, Moville and Temple Mor (Derry) in the Inishowen peninsula. While their political importance in Ireland may have come to an abrupt end with their defeat at Caim Eirge in 1241, the McLaughlins continued to wield considerable influence in

In 1330, following a family squabble, the De Burgos suddenly withdrew from the Inishowen peninsula after an occupation of over seventy years, leaving a political vacuum in the area. Into this political vacuum stepped the O'Doherty's of Clan Firbaithin, kinsmen to the O'Donnells. The Mac Aughlins, nearly destroyed in a spat in the battle of Caim Eirge nearly a century before, must have watched helplessly as the Clann Donnell forces swept into the peninsula in the wake of the Norman withdrawal. Without the support of the Clann Dughaim chieftains, who dies date beyond only to the O'Neills, the Mac Aughlins were unable to resist the advance of the O'Doherty's into their territory.

The O'Doherty's had formerly been Lords of the Kingdom of Aird Mhodhair in central Donegal, but over the centuries had expanded their original holdings by annexing the kingdoms of Magh Ith and Tír Eanna, the latter bordering the Inishowen peninsula to the south. Following the De Burgos withdrawal from Ulster, the O'Dohertys as subject chieftains of the ruling O'Donnells moved quickly into the peninsula and within a few years established their overlordship of the territory. In 1342, commenting on the death of Donnell O'Donnell, the Annals of Ulster state, "and it is not this alone, for there was little wanting from his having the Lordship of Tuath-Eoghain and the Lordship of the Country of Tír-Eanna as well ..."

The O'Dohertys are first noted "Lords of Inishowen in the most noteworthy Annals of the Kingdom of Ireland in 1413 and the peninsula thereafter became known as "O'Doherty's Country" and is referred to as such in all state documents of the 16th and 17th centuries. The O'Doherty's probably was awarded Inishowen personally by the O'Donnells as a means of protecting their claim to the territory is revealed in a letter made by Hugh Roe O'Donnell to the English in 1590: "O Doherty hath no lands but what O'Donnell doth give him or Tyrconnell. Neither had his predecessors any lands there but such as they held of O'Donnell's ancestors."

Although the Mac Aughlins, in the words of O'Donovan, had been "reduced to obscurity" by the O'Neills, the O'Donnells and the O'Dohertys, they still retained large tracts of land near Derry and on the Foyle shore in Magh Itha Parish as their traditional sept landholdings. It is probable that most of these landholdings were subsequently converted into church or monastic lands, safe from deprivation in times of war, a frequent occurrence in the Inishowen peninsula as the O'Donnells and the O'Neills quarrelled over its ownership.

In English inquisitions taken at Derry and Lifford in 1609 the Mac Aughlins appear as freeholders in the offices of church or monastery land in the Parishes of Clonca, Muff/Ile and Tempo/Mac (Derry) in the Inishowen peninsula. While their political importance in Ireland may have come to an abrupt end with their defeat at Caim Eirge in 1241, the Mac Aughlins continued to wield considerable influence in the affairs of the church, "claiming a prescriptive right to the high places in the See of Derry on account of their old ascendancy." History preserves the names of Nicholas "the Loughlinnagh" or McLaughlin, Prior of the Dominican Abbey in Derry in 1397 and Donaldus McGlachlyn, mentioned as one of the Chapter of Derry in Colton's Visitations. Bishops of Derry include Geoffrey MacLochlainn, 1297-1315 and Michael MacLochlainn, 1319-1324. A Patrick Loclannach or McLaughlin was appointed Vicar of Clonca Parish in 1425 and also held the title of the Vicar of Culldaff. Later Bishops of Derry include Peter McLaughlin, consecrated Bishop of Raphoe in 1802 but translated to Derry in 1823 and John McLaughlin, his nephew, who succeeded him.

From 1241 on the McLaughlins are mentioned only occasionally in the Annals and were to be found fighting the battles of the north of Ireland under the leadership of the O'Donnells and the O'Doghertys of Cinel Chonaill rather than with the Cinel Eoghainn. In 1603 the McLaughlins appear in a list of pacificated septs in a grant to Rory O'Donnell and in 1608 are described in the State Papers as being under the protection of Sir Neale Garve O'Donnell and his men.

In 1601 two McLaughlin chieftains are listed in the State Papers as dwelling in small castles on the shore of Lough Foyle in Moville Parish in the Inishowen peninsula. Hugh Carrogh MacLaughlyn, described as the "chief of his sept," appears at Caire MacEwlyn (later known as Redcastle). Brian Oge MacLaughlyn is listed a few miles away in Garnagall Castle (later known as Whitecastle). Both small castles were forfeited to the English crown a few years later and were granted to Sir Arthur Chichester as part of a grant which included most of the Inishowen peninsula. Chichester leased them to George Carey and both were in ruins by the middle of the 17th century.

The McLaughlins formed a large part of the standing army of Sir Cahir O'Dogherty and appear prominently in a pardon list said to have been prepared by local herenagh families in 1602. In 1608 they participated in the brief uprising of Sir Cahir O'Dogherty and were heavily represented in the pardon lists of King James I in 1609.

In 1608 the Plantation of Ulster was begun by the English with the stated intention of removing the native Irish from their lands and replacing them with Scottish and English settlers safely loyal to the English crown. All of the native Irish families of standing were driven out of the more fertile areas of the southern parts of the Inishowen peninsula at this date. Most of the displaced landholding chieftains migrated into the north of the Inishowen peninsula, which was as yet sparsely settled by the English and where the ancient Gaelic order still prevailed. Other Inishowen families are said to have migrated to the Province of Connacht in the west of Ireland at about this time.At the time of the Inquistion in 1609, the O'Doghertys and the McLaughlins were the principle landholders in the Inishowen peninsula. The following names appear in a list of native Irish holding lands under Chichester in 1622:

Felim O Dougherty, John McDwalto McLaughlin, Hugh Carron McOwen McLaughlin, Owen McShane Cugh McLaughlin, Owen Gorme McLaughlin, Donnell McBrian Oge McLaughlin, Nigell Oge McPhelim brosts O Dogherty, Richard O Dougherty, and Hugh McShane Ballagh O Dogherty.

Neither the O'Doghertys nor the McLaughlins received grants of land under the plantation scheme in Kilmacrenan Barony, which was reserved for Scottish Servitors and the native Irish chieftains, although both Donnell McBrian Oge McLaughlin and Richard Oge O Dougherty retained small freeholds in the Inishowen peninsula until they were confiscated in the aftermath of the Irish rebellion of 1641. Several McLaughlins appear in the Census of 1659 as "tituladoes" or the most important person in the district, including Brian Og McGlaghlin, gent., in the townland of Meaneletterbaile and Dbnnell McGlaghlin, gent., in the townland of Masagleen, both of Moville Parish. Edmund Moder McLaughlin and his son, Hugh, gent., appear in the townland of Tully One Trien in Clonca Parish and Donnell Ballagh McGlaghlin, gent., appears in the townland of Menedaragh, also in Clonca Parish.

In the Inquisitions of 1609 Manus McMelaghlin (a mistake for McLaughlin) appears as the herenagh of Carrigcooley (now the townland of Cooley) in Moville Parish in the Inishowen peninsula. In the same parish there is a reference to the "half a quarter of free land named Taivennegallon in the tenure of the McLaughlins." In Clonca Parish the "Clanloughlangrilles" or McLaughlins appear as one of three herenagh families, holding the "seven quarters called Crellagh (Greallagh)."

That branch of the McLaughlins holding the herenagh lands of Derry are represented by the following references:

> "Finding: That the Bishop of Derry is seized in fee, in right of his See, time out of mind, of a house or castle, and a garden plot on the south of the cathedral near the long tower in the island of Derry, and of an orchard or park on the east side of the great fort there, paying thereout yearly to the herenagh Laghlina 10 white groats ....."

> That the dean of Derry is seized, in like manner, of a small parcel of land in the said island - that within the said island is the herenagh Loghlina in Derry diocese and the herenagh O'Derry in Raphoe diocese ...."

> That O'Donnell's castle, within the lower fort of Derry City was bought by O'Donnell from the herenagh Laghlinagh for 20 cows as part of his herenagh, and built by O'Dougherty for O'Donnell's use ...."

According to Col. Colby, superintendent of the "Ordnance Survey of County Londonderry, 1834" McLaughlins were herenaghs of one-half of the church lands of Derry.

In the Civil Survey of 1654 Donnell MacBrian Oge McGloghlin is named as an "Irish Papist" holding the one-half quarter of Clare in Moville Parish as a freehold, probably the same freehold described in the Inquisition of 1609 at Lifford as "Taivennegallon" in the tenure of the McLaughlins. This small freehold consisted of 55 acres of land, 25 of them arable, 5 acres of "Redd Bogg" and 10 acres of mountains. It was forfeited to the English Crown in the Cromwellian settlements of 1657 in which Donnell MacBrian Oge McLaughlin appears as a forfeiting proprietor.

Although politically insignificant in later centuries, the McLaughlins were still considered a "family of standing" in the Inishowen peninsula as large landholders and herenaghs of church lands, a highly respected and influential position on the local level in Irish society. Most of the herenaghs, according to Col. Colby, were scholars, could speak Latin and functioned as the custodians of culture and learning in the villages of Ireland. As the highest civil official at the local level in Irish society, they also were the determiners of all civil questions and controversies arising among their neighbors.

A sept could receive its herenagh lands in one of two ways. The position was an inherited one, but if the appointed herenagh sept died out, a new sept was chosen to take its place. Or a landholding sept could donate its lands to the church, receiving them back as "herenagh" lands, exempt from despoliation in times of war, in return acting as the lay official of the church, responsible for the repair and maintenance of the church. The herenagh families also paid an annual rent to the church, of livestock and produce. Because herenagh land was traditionally spared by marauding armies, many septs in the Inishowen peninsula, including the McLaughlins, donated their lands to the church to protect their livestock and possessions from the armies of the O'Donnells and the O'Neills.

In the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 the McLaughlins still appear most prominently in their old strongholds of Moville, Culdaff and Clonca Parishes in the Inishowen peninsula and down the Foyle shore into the Parish of Temple Mor near Derry (now the Parishes of Muff and Burt and Inch). No McLaughlins appear in the "Rent Roll of Derry," dated 15 May 1628 or in the Muster Rolls of 1630 for Co. Donegal. The Census of 1659 records the surnames of four McLaughlin families living in or near the Liberties of the City of Londonderry and many McLaughlin births, marriages and deaths appear in the Temple Mor Parish records of the Derry Cathedral, 1642-1703, many of whom are named as "of this parish" or from Clendermot Parish in Londonderry County. In the Census of 1659 19 McLaughlin families appear in the nearby Barony of Terkerin in Londonderry County and 30 in the Barony of Kenaght, indicating those McLaughlins holding the herenagh lands of Derry were probably largely dispersed into these areas after 1608. Curiously, the surname does not appear in the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 for Londonderry County.

In the Census of 1659 the McLaughlin surname also appears for the first time in the Barony of Noylagh and Bonagh in the west of Co. Donegal; and in the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 in the Baronies of Kilmacrenan and Raphoe, indicating that members of this sept were displaced into these areas as well. As evidenced by the Griffith's Evaluation of Tenements beginning in 1854 the McLaughlin surname by that date was to be found in nearly every parish in the Inishowen peninsula and occurred generally throughout both Donegal and Londonderry, if in lesser numbers.

Three McLaughlins also appear in the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 (incomplete) for Tyrone County, all in the Barony of Omagh, and may be the families referred to by J.P. Brown in his "MacLoughlins of Clan Owen" who lived in the vicinity of Glen Mournan near Strabanne and claimed to be of the "chief stock" of the family.

Branches of the Family

At the end of the 16th century, based on O'Clery's Book of Genealogies, there were three distinct branches of the McLaughlins of Tirconnell sept, each with a number of smaller branches, in all numbering perhaps one hundred men capable of bearing arms. All were descendants of Domnall MacLochlainn, slain at the Battle of Caim Eirge in 1241 A.D., through the line of his son, Murchadh (Moroch).

First Branch
Moville Parish

Inishowen peninsula

Descendants of Aibhne or Anthony (Cathine) Mac Aogáibhín, chief of ésp., whose death is mentioned in the Annals in 1516 A.D., through the lines of his three sons, Hugh, Ruaidhrí and Niall. This is the only branch of the Mac Aogáibhín which can be identified with any certainty through English documents of the 17th century.

This branch of the Mac Aogáibhín of Tuaisceart were seated in Moville Parish on the shore of Lough Foyle in the Inishowen peninsula and held the townsland lands of Carrigcooley (Coolev), the one-half quarter freehold of Clare, Cuas MacEwlyn or Rabeasile and Garmagall Castle (Wakeastle).

Descendants of this branch of the family include Hugh carragh Mac Aogáibhín, seated at Cuas MacEwlyn or Rabeasile in the townland of Tullyravan in Moville Parish in 1601, described in the State Papers as the "Chief of his sept." The castle was forfeited to the crown at about that date because in an inquisition taken at Lifford in 1602 Hugh Carragh is named as a juror from the townland of Ballibrack, much further to the north in Moville Parish.

Other descendants include Owen gorme Mac Aogáibhín, Hugh carragh's brother, who appears in a list of native Irish holding land under Sir Arthur Chichester in the Inishowen peninsula in 1622. Also named in the same inquisition was John MacDwalle Mac Aogáibhín, the son of Donlaithigh. He held the lands of Tevenagoes in Tullyravin in 1622. Manus mannae, an uncle, may have been the Manus MacMeagáibhín described in an inquisition taken at Lifford in 1609 as the tuaisceart of Carrigcooley.

Several members are named in the pardon list of 1602 including John MacDwalle Mac Aogáibhín, his brother, Hugh boy, Hugh carragh, Edmund Mac Aogáibhín and his son, Brian modarha.

Descendants of this branch held Garmagall Castle and the one-quarter freehold of Clare in Moville Parish and are identifiable through the 18th century in Amy's county "Three Hundred Years in Inishowen."

Named in the pardon list of 1602 are Donogh and John dalta, sons of Manus Mac Aogáibhín (who also may have been the tuaisceart of Cooley discussed previously), Brian óge Mac Aogáibhín and his sons, Domnall and Torlough.

This branch of the family was headed by Torlough caech, who appears in the 1602 pardon list as "Terlie dhim." His son Brian Óge Mac Aogáibhín held Garmagall Castle in 1601 and appears in the same pardon list as "Brian m'Terlie oge." His son Domnall MacBrian Oge appears in the list as "Donell m'Brian," as does his brother, Torlough m'Brian.

Domnall or Donnell MacBrian Oge, after the loss of Garmagall Castle in 1601-1602, later held the one-half quarter freehold of Clare in Moville Parish, probably the same one-quarter freehold described in the Inquisition of 1609 as "Tuaisceartgallon in the tenure of the Mac Aogáibhín."

In 1627 Donnell MacBrian Oge is named as a forfeiting proprietor in the Commwealthan settlement of that year. He is also listed as holding the same one-half quarter of Clare under Chichester in 1622. In the Census of 1659 a Brian Og McGilaghlin, gent., is named as a tuaisceartgallon in the townland of Meanaghrahoe in the extreme north of Moville Parish. A Donnell McGilaghlin, gent., appears in the adjacent townland of Magaglean, also a tuaisceartgallon. These men are probably the same Brian Oge Mac Aogáibhín of Garmagall Castle, 1601, and his son, Donnell MacBrian Oge, of the townland of Clare, 1622-1627. Two of Donnell MacBrian Oge's grandsons, Fiachrí and Torlough, were later tenants of the Rev. George McLaughlin, their nephew, who inherited the lands of Glenagivenny from his father, Domnall or Daniel McLaughlin, the Rector of Clonmany.

These three townlands, Meaneletterbailee, Massagleen and Glenagivenny form a district within Moville Parish known as "An Gleann" or "the Glens." It appears as though members of this branch of the McLaughlins removed to this part of Moville Parish after the forfeiture of Garnagall Castle in about 1601 and that of Clare in 1657.

The subsequent history of the descendants of Torlogh caech is related in Amy Young's "Three Hundred Years in Inishowen"as follows:

> "Donald McBrian Oge was the son of Brian Oge, and he had a son named Owen, who died in his father's lifetime, leaving six sons: Donaghy Boy, Domnall, Peter, Turlogh and Shane Crone. Donaghy boy died in 1697, leaving two sons, Henry, died abroad 1709; and Brian, died abroad 1713. Domnall or Daniel and Peter were destined for the Roman Catholic priesthood, and as there was no means in Ireland at that time of preparing them for thsi, they were dispatched to the Continent, probably to Spain, to enter a college. The vessell in which they sailed was shipwrecked on the English coast and the two young men were taken to the house of a nobleman, who interested himself in their fate, and offered, if they would conform to the religion of the English Church, to have them educated at one of the English Universities. Peter refused and continued his journey, and was eventually ordained a priest . Domnall changed his opinions (and his name to Daniel), went to the English University and in due time was ordained a clergyman of the established church. In 1672 he was appointed to the parish of Clonmany, where his brother Peter was now Roman Catholic priest. The two brothers found themselves in very opposite circumstances. Daniel had a large well-built church, but no congregation; for even at the present day the Protestant population of the parish is practically non-existent. Peter, on the other hand, had a congregation numbering thousands, but their only places of worship were 'little altars' which stood by the seaside or on the mountaintops. His house was a miserable little thatched cabin by the seashore, in the townland of Crossconnell.
> The brothers lived to a good old age, and many tales are told of them. On one occasion, on a Sunday, they met on the way to their respective services. Domnall remarked: 'One going over, the other coming back.' Not so,' said Peter. 'The one going up, and the other going down, and may God judge between us which is which.'
> Daniel built for himself a beautiful residence, known as Dresden, situated in one of the loveliest spots in the whole of Inishowen. Here, later, lived the Rev. Dr. Chichester, Rector of Clonmany, 1754, who died in 1815. The house was not occupied after 1841 and is now in ruins.
> Daniel died first and Peter mourned deeply for him. Their

the Rev. George McLaughlin, their nephew, who inherited the lands of Glenagivenny from his father, Donnacll or Daniel McLaughlin, the Rector of Clonmany.

These three townlands, Meenalecrhallos, Meenaglen and Glenagivenny form a district within Moville Parish known as "An Glenn" or "the Glen." It appears as though members of this branch of the McLaughlins removed to this part of Moville Parish after the forfeiture of Garragal Castle in about 1601 and that of Clare in 1627.

The subsequent history of the descendants of Torlogh Gesch is related in Amy Young's "Three Hundred Years in Inishowen" as follows:

"Donnacll McLaughlin Oge was the son of Brian Oge, and he had a son named Owen, who died in his father's lifetime, leaving six sons, Donnaghy Roy, Donnacll, Peter, Turlough and Shane Crone. Donnaghy Roy died in 1697, leaving two sons, Henry, died abroad 1709, and Brian, died abroad 1713. Donnacll or Daniel and Peter were destined for the Roman Catholic priesthood, and as there was no means in Ireland at that time of preparing them for this, they were dispatched to the Continent, probably to Spain, to enter a college. The vessel in which they sailed was shipwrecked on the English coast and the two young men were taken to the house of a nobleman, who interested himself in their fate, and offered, if they would conform to the religion of the English Church, to have them educated at one of the English Universities. Peter refused and continued his journey, and was eventually ordained a priest.

Donnacll changed his opinions (and his name to Daniel), went to the English University and in due time was ordained a clergyman of the established church. In 1672 he was appointed to the parish of Clonmany, where his brother Peter was now Roman Catholic priest. The two brothers found themselves in very opposite circumstances. Daniel had a large well-built church, but no congregation, for even at the present day the Protestant population of the parish is practically non-existent. Peter, on the other hand, had a congregation numbering thousands, but their only places of worship were little altars which stood by the wayside or on the mountaintops. His house was a miserable little thatched cabin by the wayside, in the townland of Croaghonnacll.

The brothers lived to a good old age, and many tales are told of them. On one occasion, on a Sunday, they met on the way to their respective services. Donnacll remarked, 'One going over the other coming back.' 'Not so,' said Peter. 'The one going up, and the other going down, and may God judge between us which is which.'

Daniel built for himself a beautiful residence, known as Drumalan, situated in one of the loveliest spots in the whole of Inishowen. Here, later, lived the Rev. Dr. Chichester, Rector of Clonmany, 1734, who died in 1815. The house was not occupied after 1841 and is now in ruins.

Daniel died first and Peter mourned deeply for him. Their mother lived for many years after Domnall's change of faith, which never ceased to be a sorrow and grief to her. She seems to have been of a poetical turn of mind, and has immortalised her sorrow in verse, of which the following is an extract.

'Can it be spoken
How my heart is broken, by thy fall, Oh! Domnall, from the ancient faith
With less of sorrow
Could I view tomorrow
My lost one herding on the mountain brown
Than strange doctrine teaching,
And new tenets preaching,
At yon lordly window, in his silken gown.'

Machtochair's "Inishowen"

Daniel married, about 1670-1680, Elizabeth, daughter of Alderman Thomas Skipton, of Ballyshaskey, and his wife Charity, daughter of Sir Thomas Staples of Lissane. The ancestry of Elizabeth is given at the end of this chapter.

He had two sons and four daughters, as follows -

1. George, born 1687. Entry in T.C.D. records - McLaughlin, George, Pen. (Mr. Jenkins, Londonderry), June 25, 1700, aged 17; son of Daniel, Clericus; born co. Down [a mistake for Donegal]. B.A., Vern, 1704. M.A. Aest, 1707. He possessed the lands of Claar and Glengivenny, which had come to his father at the death of his elder brother Donaghy Boy in 1697 or more probably at the death of the latter's youngest son Brian in 1713. He was Rector of Errigal Parish, Garvagh, Co. Derry, from 1782-86, but lived at Culdaff in his later years, and died there, and seems to have left his property to his nephew, Robert Young. There were still in existence in Culdaff House some of his old rentals and notes, of which copies now exist. Mention is made of 'my uncle Phelimy McLaughlin,' and 'my uncle Turlogh Mclaughlin,' of Glenagivenny, as paying rent for lands in that part; and until the estates were sold there was a family, who, when coming to Culdaff to pay rent, were always brought into the house and treated on a different basis to the other tenants, as relatives.

3. Elizabeth, married, 1703, George Young of Culdaff. .

He had two sons and four daughters, as follows -

1. George, born 1687. Entry in T.C.D. records -

He possessed the lands of Claar and Glengivanny which had come to his father, at the death of his elder brother Donnaghy Roe in 1697 or more probably at the death of the latter's youngest son Hugh in 1713. He was Rector of Errigal Farm, Coleraigh, Co. Derry, from 1782-86, but lived at Culdaff in his later years, and died there, and seems to have left his property to his nephew, Robert Young. Addenda
A Donogh boy appears in the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 in the townland of Clare and is probably the same Donaghy boy, grandson of Donnell MacBrian Oge, who died in 1697. This may also be the same Donogh boy Maghlaghlin, merchant, appointed as a burgess of the City of Londonderry in 1688. According to Amy Young, of Shane crone and his son, Daniel, nothing more is known. But a Shan m'Laughlin and a Donnell M'Laughlin appear in the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 for the townland of Moneydarragh in Culdaff Parish and a Donnell ballagh McGlaghlin is named as a titulado residing in the townland of Menedaragh in Clonca Parish in the Census of 1659. Because the townland of Moneydarragh is adjacent to the townland of Clare, which later passed into the possession of the Rev. George McLaughlin, it is probable this Shan M'Laughlin is the same Shane crone of Amy Young's "Inishowen;" and Donnell ballagh McGlaghlin, gent., was his son Daniel (or more probably, Domnall or Donnell). Also appearing in the same townland in 1665 was a Brian McLaughlin, possibly the son of Donaghy boy, said to have died abroad in 1713.

Note: The townland of Moneydarragh was divided between the parishes of Culdaff and Clonca, which explains its inclusion in both parishes in the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 and the Census of 1659.

Second Branch
McLaughlin of Derry
Templemore Parish
Inishowen peninsula

Descendants of Owen McLaughlin "an Oiffistel" or "the Official." The brother of Aibhne or Anthony, founder of the McLaughlins of Moville Parish.

The only identification possible concerning this branch of the McLaughlins of Tirconnell is that they held the herenagh lands of the McLaughlins in Temple Mor Parish in or near the island of Derry. Owen McLaughlin "the Official," founder of this branch was undoubtably a church official of some kind as was his grandson, Felim an Oirchindigh or "the herenagh." This strong identification with the church makes it probable this was the branch of the McLaughlins known in Donegal as the "McLaughlins of Derry."

Because the church lands in Derry were seized and awarded to the crown at a very early date (before the Inquisitions of 1609) no names of members of this branch are preserved in English documents, except for a few vague references to a herenagh "Laghlina" who lived on the island of Derry. In addition, the area near Derry is that mentioned by Brian Bonner as being cleared of native Irish

4. Ann, married R. Keys and had a son, George.

5. Mary, married, before 1711, John Dougherty, and had a son, John.

6. Charity, married after 1711, Michael Dougherty, and had two sons, Daniel and George.

Shane Crone, the youngest son of Owen McLaughlin, and a brother of the Rev. Daniel, also married and had a son, Daniel, of whom nothing more is known.

Addendum

A Donough boy appears in the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 in the townland of Clare and is probably the same Donough boy, grandson of Donnell McLaughlin Oge, who died in 1667. This may also be the same Donough boy McLaughlin, merchant, appointed as a burgess of the City of Londonderry in 1685. According to Amy Young, of Shane crone and his son, Daniel, nothing more is known. But a Shane McLaughlin and a Donnell McLaughlin appear in the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 for the townland of Moneydarragh in Culdaff Parish and a Donnell Balagh McClaghlin is named as a trustee residing in the townland of Mondarragh in Clonca Parish in the Census of 1659. Because the townland of Moneydarragh is adjacent to the townland of Clare, which later passed into the possession of the Rev. George McLaughlin, it is probable this Shane McLaughlin is the same Shane crone of Amy Young's "Inishowen" and Donnell Balagh McClaghlin, poor, was his son Daniel (or more probably, Donnell or Dominick). Also appearing in the same townland in 1665 was a Brian McLaughlin, possibly the son of Donough boy, said to have died abroad in 1713.

Note: The townland of Moneydarragh was divided between the parishes of Culdaff and Clonca, which explains its inclusion in both registers in the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 and the Census of 1659.

Second Division
McLaughlin of Derry
Independent Branch
Unknown paternity

Descendants of Owen McLaughlin "an Cultach" or "the Cultach" "the Oldest" "the brother of Anthony, lord of the McLaughlins of Moville Parish.

The only identification possible concerning this branch of the McLaughlins of Tirconnell is that they held the hereditary lordship of the McLaughlins in Temple Mor Parish in or near the island of Derry. Owen McLaughlin "the Cultach" (lord or chieftain of this branch was not authority a church official of some kind as was his grandson, Fergus na Crichdeagh or "the bearnagh." This strong identification with the church makes it probable that was the branch of the McLaughlins known in Donegal as the "McLaughlins of Derry."

Income the church lands in Derry were seized and awarded to the crown at a very early date (before the Ingoldsby of 1609) no names of members of this branch are preserved in English documents, except for a few vague references to a bearnagh "Laughlins" who lived on the island of Derry. In addition, the area was Derry is that mentioned by Brian Bonner as being cleared of native Irish chieftains in about 1608 and heavily planted with English settlers. Although in 1665 a few McLaughlins still lived in the more remote parts of the Parish of Templemore near Derry, it appears as though most members of this branch had been dislocated into the Baronies of Terkerin and Kenaght in nearby Londonderry County.

In addition to the McLaughlins of Moville Parish (known popularly as the "McLaughlins of Garnagall") and the McLaughlins of Derry, we are aware of at least one other large landholding held by the McLaughlins in the Inishowen peninsula, that of the "Clanloughlangrilles" in Clonca Parish.

As is the case with the McLaughlins of Derry, their lands were confiscated at a very early date and none of their names are preseved in English documents of the 17th century. However, it is possible a branch of the McLaughlins of Derry were awarded the herenagh lands of Greallagh in Clonca Parish because of its close association with the See of Derry.

In 1622 an Owen McShane cugh McLaughlin appears in the Inquisition of 1622 holding land under Chichester in the townland of Baskill in Culdaff Parish. This man is probably the same Owen McShane caoch who appears in O'Clery's Genealogies and in the pardon list of 1602 as Owen m'Shane chair. The nickname "cugh" is therefor probably a mistake for "caech" or "chair."

In the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 the following names appear in the townland of Greallagh, of which the "Clanloughlangrilles" or McLaughlins were herenaghs:

James McLaughlin
Owen McLaughlin
Connor McLaughlin
Neale McLaughlin Sr.
Neale McLaughlin Jr.
Hugh McLaughlin

These men appear to have been descendants of the same John caech described above, who according to O'Clery's Genealogies had sons named Owen, Brian modartha, James, Connor the Friar and Manus McLaughlin. A definite identification of the "Clanloughlangrilles" is unfortunately impossible given the available source documents, but it is possible that a branch of the herenaghs of Derry were at some date awarded the herenagh lands of the monastic foundation at Greallagh in Clonca Parish. According to Brian Bonner, Greallagh was the site of a Columban monastic foundation which was in later centuries subordinate to the Vicar of Culdaff and controlled by the Bishop of Derry, to whom the herenaghs of Greallagh paid their rent. The lands of Greallagh are now known as Carrowtemple (Temple moyle), Drumaville and Drumballycaslin.

In 1425 A Patrick Loclannach or McLaughlin was named the Vicar of Greallagh and also held the Vicarship of Culdaff. He later died at the Apostolic See in Rome while on a pilgrimmage. It therefore appears probable the McLaughlins held their herenagh lands in Greallagh from at least this date.

Descendants of the "Eoghanaigh," the eldest son of Niall, through the line of his son Hugh.

elections in about 1618 and heavily planted with English settlers. Although in 1665 a few McLaughlins still lived in the more remote parts of the Parish of Templemore near Derry, it appears as though great numbers of this branch had been dislocated into the Baronies of Tullyhin and Kenaught in nearby Londonderry County.

In addition to the McLaughlins of Moville Parish (however popularly as the "McLaughlins of Carnagall") and the McLaughlins of Derry, we are aware of at least one other large landholding sept by the McLaughlins in the Inishowen peninsula, that of the "Clanloughlaghlies" in Clonca Parish.

As is the case with the McLaughlins of Derry, their lands were confiscated at a very early date and some of their names are preserved in English documents of the 17th century. However, it is possible a branch of the McLaughlins of Derry were granted the herenagh lands of Creeslagh in Clonca Parish because of its close association with the See of Derry.

In 1622 an Owen McShane mac McLaughlin appears in the inquisitions of 1622 holding land under Chichester in the townland of Ballywill in Cullahill Parish. This man is probably the same Owen McShane oweich who appears in O'Clery's Genealogies and in the pardon list of 1602 as Owen m'Shane oheir. The nickname "oweich" is therefore probably a mistake for "oweich" or "oheir".

In the Hearth Money Rolls of 1663 the following names appear in the townland of Creeslagh, of which the "Clanloughlaghlies" or McLaughlins were herenaghs.

James McLaughlin
Owen McLaughlin
Connor McLaughlin
Neale McLaughlin Sr.
Neale McLaughlin Jr.
Hugh McLaughlin

These men appear to have been descendants of the same John mac McLaughlin described above, who according to O'Clery's Genealogies had sons named Owen, Brian, Donnchadh, James, Connor, the Tyler and Neasa McLaughlin. A definite identification of the "Clanloughlaghlies" is unfortunately impossible given the available source documents, but it is probable that a branch of the herenaghs of Derry were at some date granted the herenagh lands of the monastic foundation at Creeslagh in Clonca Parish. According to Sean Bonner, Creeslagh was the site of a Columbian monastic foundation which was in later centuries subordinate to the Vicar of Cullahill and controlled by the Bishop of Derry, to whom the herenagh of Creeslagh paid their rent. The lands of Creeslagh are now known as Carrow Templa (Teampla mhór), Dunmaville and Dunbalivodin.

In 1423 a Patrick Lochannach or McLaughlin was named the Vicar of Creeslagh and also held the Vicarship of Cullahill. He later died at the Apostolic See in Rome while on a pilgrimage. It therefore appears probable the McLaughlins held these herenagh lands in Creeslagh from at least this date.

Kerry of Glen Mourne
Perry of Donegal

Descendants of the "Toghmaghly," the oldest son of Niall, through the line of his son Hugh

This is the most difficult branch of the McLaughlins to identify with any certainty. None of their names are recognizeable in 17th century documents and there is a serious error in O'Clery's genealogies concerning their descent (see Betham's transcription of the Linea Antiqua). However, based on O'Clery's Genealogies, it appears as though this branch of the McLaughlins of Tirconnell held lands in Co. Tyrone apart from the main body of the sept in the Inishowen peninsula. The founder of this branch is described in the genealogies as the "Eoghanaigh," a descriptive term translated by Betham in other Irish genealogies as 'of Tyrone,' i.e., one who dwelt in Tyrone. This "Eoghanaigh" (his given name is not recorded) therefore appears to have left the traditional homelands of the McLaughlins in Co. Donegal and settled in Co. Tyrone under the O'Neill chieftains.

Two later descendants of this branch of the family bore the nickname "galloglach" or "gallowglass," an epithet usually but not always applied to Scottish merceneries. Without a territory of their own, it appears that at least certain members of this branch of the McLaughlins of Tirconnell functioned as mercenery soldiers, perhaps under the O'Neill princes of Tyrone.

J.P. Brown, in his "MacLoughlins of Clan Owen" (1879) made several references to a branch of the McLaughlins which resided in Tyrone County and considered itself of the main stock of the family.

> "There has been for generations back a branch of the family settled in Glen Mournen near Strabanne." (p. 41)
> "After the destruction of Aileach by O'Brien, the family of the kings [McLaughlin] removed to Inis Enaigh in the parish of Urney, in Tyrone, and there dwelt until the coming of the English. This would go to show that the families of Glen Mournen and it vicinity are the chief stock, as indeed they claim to be." (p. 84).

In support of this theory is the fact that none of the names of this branch of the McLaughlins are recognizeable in the pardon lists of 1602, indicating they did not live in the Inishowen peninsula.

Turning to the Hearth Money Rolls of 1665 for Tyrone Co., only three McLaughlins are named (although some returns are missing), all in the Barony of Omagh, in the parishes of Longfield and Drumra. (townlands of sopgaly and Cullbuke).

Record

This is the most difficult branch of the McLaughlins to identify with any certainty. None of their names are recognizable in 17th century documents and there is a serious error in O'Clery's genealogies concerning their descent (see Bethan's transcription of the Lúrga Aithiúgtha). However, based on O'Clery's Genealogies, it appears as though this branch of the McLaughlins of Tirconnell held lands in Co. Tyrone apart from the main body of the sept in the Inishowen peninsula. The founder of this branch is described in the genealogies as the "Eoghanachigh," a descriptive term translated by Bethan in other Irish genealogies as 'of Tyrone,' i.e., one who dwelt in Tyrone. > "There has been for years attains back a branch of the family settled in Glen Mourneen near Strabane." (p. 41)

> "After the destruction of Aileach by O'Brien, the family of the kings [McLaughlin] removed to this Eineagh in the parish of Urney, in Tyrone, and there dwelt until the coming of the English. This would go to show that the families of Glen Mourneen and it vicinity are the chief stock, as indeed they claim to be." (p. 34)

In support of this theory is the fact that none of the names of this branch of the McLaughlins are recognizable in the pardon lists of 1602, indicating they did not live in the Inishowen peninsula.

Turning to the Hearth Money Rolls of 1663 for Tyrone Co., only three McLaughlins are named (although some names are missing), all in the Barony of Omagh, in the parishes of Longfield and Donaghmore, (townlands of Augnaby and Culbokie).

I do not know his age. In 1840 there is a Willis McLaughlin with a male and female 20-30 and a male and female under 5. Henry's birthdate is listed in his wife's Bible as 27 Jul 1836. In 1880 he states he was born in TN. Before I found that info, family lore always said he was born in Ireland, came to US at age 7 and his mother's maiden name was Marley. Henry named his first born Willis Marley, 2nd William Henry Redden, 3rd John, 4th J. M., 5th J. D. (they were Jimmy and Jody, but no one knows which was which as they died as infants) 6th Addis Alva, 6th Sarah Elizabeth (Sally).

In an earlier census in (as I recall, I can check) Cocke County, there is an older Willis McLaughlin who married a Mary White. There are only records of that couple having two children, Ephraim and Nancy.

Maybe we are both onto something! I would be thrilled to find a connection after 30 years of brick walls.

I will most certainly keep your info handy.

Dear Vivian

Welcome to the tracers of missing persons. Enclosed are some sources and names you may try. Steven Kent McLaughlin compiled quite a large collection and put out a book he was down your way. but I never could reach him there

My step daughter sent me some stuff off the Internet last week and I see there is a Steven McLaughlin listed but from California don't know if it is the same as the one in Plano. also enclosed are a copy of my letters sent out to find some relatives. Over 300 letters and located one cousin.

Sincerely Dan McLaughlin

Dear

About two years ago a friend interested me in genealogy. My grandfather died when my father was only four months old. My grandmother remarried seven years later and all contacts with the McLaughlin family was lost. My parents have passed away and there are no aunts or uncles to question. I have resorted to this letter as a means of tracing my ancestors.

I am enclosing a list of some of my ancestors and hopefully some of yours. Can you answer any of the following questions?

1. What were your grandparents names?
2. Do you remember when and where they were born?
3. Do you recall when and where your grandparents died?
4. Do you have any aunts or uncles? What do you remember most about them?
5. Do you know anyone who has a written history of your family?
6. Do you know of any family Bibles handed down from earlier generations?
7. Do you know anyone who maybe related to any of my ancestors on the enclosed list?

The return of this letter in the stamped self-addressed envelope will be greatly appreciated whether or not you are able to answer any of the questions. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Dan McLaughlin

To: Fellow McLaughlin Researchers

Just a quick note to let you know I'm still out here kicking and to ask a favor of everyone. Over the last several months my involvement in Genealogy has become overwhelming and I have come to realize that a change in my priorities is long overdue.

Therefore, after considerable thought and evaluation I have concluded to wrap up of my Genealogical projects in the following way, and would like to ask for your cooperation and understanding.

Effective June 1st, 1988 I will cutoff the data on "Other McLaughlins" and begin compiling the information I have, into one complete volume. This eventually will consist of at least 145 lines of McLaughlins and associated spellings that we have discovered over the last 3 years.

This revised volume will include the original 76 lines we put together, plus the lines to M.145, however, I do plan to change the format in the following way:

- Reprint all data pages with updates for all 145 lines.
- Incorporate the First Generation of M.22 as we know it now.
- # the pages 1 to whatever and change the Index to refer to the appropriate page #.

I have 11 copies of the first 76 lines still available for anyone interested and I cannot tell you when the revised volume will be ready. Once the revised volume is complete, I will contact you and let you know it is available.

Enclosed, please find a current copy of my contacts and in order to help facilitate this change I would like to ask that you direct any and all mail to the following address:

Steven K. McLaughlin
P.O. Box 795301
Dallas, Tx. 75379

I have truly enjoyed all that we have accomplished and I appreciate your help, interest, and patience through my many errors and omissions. As we all know however, Genealogy is an un-ending search therefore, it is best to pick a time to capture what we have and complete the project. Again many thanks for everything and I'll truly appreciate your help and understanding.

Most Sincerely,

Steven K. McLaughlin

Sorry for not responding sooner but am out of town and travelling constantly on my job and can't answer email or letters for a month at a time.

My email address is: Lochlan@aol.com, not Lochlin (this is why it was returned).

My McLaughlin Clan web page is at: http://members.aol.com/lochlan/clanmac.htm

I'm afraid I don't have any specific info on your family but I did post your query online. Maybe someone else will be able to tie into your line for you.

Are you sure they were Irish? Many of the McLaughlins in this country, particularly the early immigrants, were Scottish MacLachlans in disguise.

The surname McLaughlin in Ireland is most common in Donegal, Londonderry and Tyrone, but it does occur throughout Ireland and one therefore needs to have some idea of what county his or her ancestor came from before doing any research in Ireland. My web page has quite a lot of info on the various groups of McLaughlins in Ireland and the counties where the name is common.

A word of warning: even if a McLaughlin came from Ireland that does not neccessarily make him of Irish descent, since quite a few Scottish MacLachlans (McLaughlins) settled briefly in northern Ireland during the Plantation Period of the 1600s before immigrating to the U.S.

George Addison McLaughlin (16 MAY 1837 - ??)

I know that my great-grandfather George Addison, who was born May 16, 1837 in England, emigrated to Canada in 1848. Since he was only 11 years old at the time, I assume that he came with his parents. George's parents were listed on his Ontario marriage document as James and Jane Addison. However I have not yet found any reference to James and Jane Addison in any Canadian source, so I am not certain about their emigration. My question is: Does anyone know if the above information is sufficient to query, and extract aresponse from the Canadian government activity cognizant of immigration and naturalization, regarding the immigration record of James Addison, or possibly George Addison?

Elizabeth SCRANTON may have been born in Scranton PA? She Married John Mc Laughlin maybe in St. Louis MO around 1860. Known children:

Mary Hickey McLaughlin (31 OCT 1876 - ??)

I have a great grandmother named Mary HICKEY who was born in Galway, Ireland to a Patrick HICKEY and Norma O'Malley - on 31 Oct 1876. She later married a McLAUGHLIN (James) and a KINSMAN (Walter George) and later a Xavier FALKEN. She moved to Canada sometime after her first marriage (I assume) and gave birth to a number of girls...then she moved thru MI into IL - where she lived until death.

From: Lochlan@AOL.COM

I have no specific information on Dohertys from Belfast, but I'm sure you're aware that Doherty is uniquely a Co. Donegal name. If your grandmother came from Belfast, either she or an ancestor most probably originally came from Donegal. The prime concentration of Dohertys in Donegal is in the Inishowen Peninsula, between Loughs Swilly and Foyle in the northeast of the county. The Doherty (or Dougherty) surname is also quite common throughout the rest of Donegal, particularly in the Kilmacrenan area. The O'Doughertys were lords of Inishowen in Donegal prior to the English conquest in the early 1600's. Sir Cahir O'Dougherty led a brief, illfated revolt against the English in about 1609 in which he was killed. A local Irish historian named Brian Bonner wrote a history of this Sir Cahir O'Dougherty, named "That Audacious Traitor," published in Ireland by the Salesian Press of which I possess a copy. I'm sure you can find a copy in Ireland if you're interested in the O'Dougherty surname. I'm not positive but I think there may have been a Scottish clan which also took the surname O'Dougherty (O Dochartaigh). If so, your O'Dohertys may have been Scottish settlers in the early 1600's. Here of course, religion is your major clue. If Catholic, your O'Doughertys are probably Irish. If Protestant or Presbyterian, they're probably Scottish. My family (MacLaughlin) is traceable to the Kilmacrenan area in Donegal and during the course of my researches, I became quite familiar with the O'Dougherty surname since it is so prevalent in the area. Most of the residents of Inishowen seem to be either MacLaughlins or O'Doughertys. Good luck with your search!

I'm a McLaughlin, from Co. Donegal (or at least my ancestors were). I don't have any info on your McLochlin line but I posted several files a year ago which included my own research into the history of the McLaughlins of Tirconnell (Donegal) with additional info on the various Irish families which wound up with the McLaughlin surname (or a close variant).

Your name McLochlin is a close transcription of the way MacLaughlin or MacLoughlin is pronounced in Irish. Both names are identical, just variations in spelling. For the record, in addition to the McLaughlins of Donegal, Londonderry and Tyrone, there were two MacLoughlin septs of Connacht, a McLoughlin sept of Meath (O'Melaghlin), and several other less well known septs which also became McLaughlins.

You might want to check out these files if you want some background on the McLaughlin/McLughlin name in Ireland.

Hello All!

My Addison ancestors lived at Stony Mountain, Manitoba, Canada from approximately 1876 to 1905. After that date there is no written record of the family at Stony Mountain.
I have been trying to determine, without success, if the Addison family migrated to Saskatchewan after it became a Province in 1905. Since Addison is not a very common name, I thought it might be worthwhile to contact all the Addisons now living in Saskatchewan, and to compare family history notes with them.

Dear Elsie/Joe ... Read your inquiry on Michael McLaughlin. My Michael McLaughlin was born around 1824 in Ballyconnell. He was a carpenter. He married a Margaret Morris. Margaret's family owned coal mines in a small Western PA town named after the family, Morrisville. They had 8 children that I know of - Sarah, Thomas H., Margaret, Joseph and Frank. After Michael's death, Margaret moved to West Virginia with one of her sons. Sarah married Mr Crawfordsher, William Daniel Logan. They lived their married life in New Castle, Pa. W.D. and Sarah had 4 children, Isabelle B., Mary E., Pearlie Bridget and William A. Logan. If any of these people could be a connection, please let me know. My system here is CRAZY. Hope this made to something. Claudia Manly.

What is the time and state or town of origina of this Thomas? I had a great-great-great uncle Thomas McLaughlin of Lucinda Furnace, PA who married Anna Lindemuth. He's buried in Lucinda. He had brothers named Chrysostom, Charles II (my great-great grandfather), Edward, Marcus John, and a sister Sarah. All of the boys except Chrysostom fought in the Civil War for the North. Marcus John died of disease. Their father, Charles McLaughlin I, came over from Ireland, Co. Derry, Aghanloo Parish, in 1834-36. I don't know yet where they landed. Is this your strain? My McLaughlin forbears ended up in Texas two generations ago, where my great-aunts, great-uncle and an

Have McGinleys and McLaughlins in the anthracite coal fields of eastern PA ca. 1860. My great-grandmother was Bridget McLaughlin Cunningham, who settled in Mauch Chunk, PA (now called Jim Thrope), a town where the McGinleys seems to be predominant. Like most of the Irish in that area, they were from County Donegal, the northwestern-most county in Ireland and, while now belonging to the Irish Free Stat, was once part of the ancient Kingdom of Ulster. I am finding that later immigrants from County Donegal, perhaps younger siblings and cousins, chose to settle in the Middle West for that is where the action was, say, in the 1880s.

To have any real hope of tracing your ancestors back to Ireland, you must find a more precise location than a county (maybe an interest). To give you an example, we know our great-great-grandfather came from Co. Donegal (Ulster McLaughlin). But there are literally thousands of McLaughlin living all over Co. Donegal, so just knowing the county is not enough.

It turned out our family were small tenant farmers and held leases in a township called Fordoneyll, in Kilmacrenan Barony, Co. Donegal. We discovered this townland name in an old will, in which our ancestor's brothers and sisters were named as living in Rathdonnell.

A word of caution. The Irish often listed as their city of birth the nearest city to the townland in which they lived. Thus our family said they came from Letterkenny - they did not - it was just the nearest city of any size to their farm.

If you are lucky enough to discover the exact city or townland from which your ancestors emigrated, you can then go to a branch library of the LDS (Latter Day Saints) and order microfilm copies of two important census substitutes, the Griffith's Evaluations (ca. 1858) and the earlier Tithe Applotment Books (ca. 1820). These records list the occupiers of land by townland. They aren't as valuable as real census records but those do not exist in Ireland until 1901. You can also order church records from the LDS for the same areas (these begin in about 1850-60). There are a number of handbooks on how to proceed with Irish genealogy available in many local libraries. I'd check one of these.

But remember, without a precise location (a townland, the nearest city, or the city in which they lived), it is nearly impossible to trace anyone back in Ireland unless you still have relatives in that country or your ancestors immigrated fairly recently.

Hope this helps. Good luck!

Subj: Ber:GLOVER (PA)
From: NUMERAGON.COM

Came across the Glover name only six months ago on a death certificate. My Glover was Jane Glover McLaughlin (b. abt 1790, and married into my family abt 1820 in Rye Twp Cumberland Co. She later moved to Richland Co OH. As of yet I have little on her family other than tax records for her suspected father, William Glover. The only other Glovers I've found in OH are an Isaac who owned land in Richland County in the 1820s and a Maribah Glover b 1816 in Cumberland Co PA. I suspect both may be connected because an Isaac shows in the same PA tax records as William and Maribah was not only from the same area as Jane also married into McLaughlins. Maribah later shows in Noble Co OH in the mid 19th century. This is a long winded way of saying I don't know of a connection now. Can you provide more details on Anna's husband, where in OH was she born and where her line settled? Thanks Mike

Rescue Lawrence b. 3 Oct 1827 m. Sarah FARNSWORTH 15 Jul 1859
Philip Ann b. 11 Feb 1830 m. Thomas COOPER 4 Jan 1849
Bryson Blessing b. 16 Nov 1831 m. Catherine ARMSTRONG 26 Dec 1855

John, I was glad to see your post. I sent one to Stephen also, but less detailed.

I have a copy of "Reports of the Special Committee on the Troubles in Kansas" which I would be glad to check for those interested, although it is not indexed.

My gg grandfather, Samuel Collins, moved from MO to KS in 1855 as a "Free State Man" and set up the first sawmill at Doniphan. As you probably know, he was killed in the fall of that year by Patrick Laughlin, who had pretended to be for the free-state cause, while spying for the pro-slavery forces. I have a dozen or so accounts of his death which vary considerably depending on the sympathies of whoever was telling the story.

Another good source is "Conquest of Kansas" by William Phillips who was a special correspondent for the New York Tribune.

If you happen to have any good information on Samuel Collins, I would appreciate knowing about it.

Don Collins

John, I was glad to see your post. I sent one to Stephen also, but have detailed.

I have a copy of Reports of the Special Committee on the Territories in Kansas, which I would be glad to crack for those interested, although it is not indexed.

My gg-grandfather, Samuel Collins, moved from MO to KS in 1855 as a "Free State Man" and set up the first sawmill at Princeton. He was probably there, as was Kelly, in the fall of that year by Sept. 1st (Kelly, who had pretended to be for the free state cause, was trying for the pro-slavery forces). I have a dozen or so accounts of his death which vary considerably depending on the sympathies of whoever was telling the story.

Another good source is "Conquest of Kansas" by William Phillips who was a special correspondent for the New York Tribune.

If you happen to have any good information on Samuel Collins, I would appreciate hearing about it.

Can anyone help me out with info on any of these individuals:

In Carroll County, Ohio in 1834, Aaron Pugh listed "my beloved Friends" Robert McLaughlin and Samuel Dunlap as executors of his will. Does anyone know if they are Quakers and if so what MM they attended???

In his will, Aaron Pugh mentions his wife Mary and sons William and Hugh and refers to other minor children. I am trying to determine if this Aaron Pugh and wife Mary are the parents of Belinda Pugh who married Amos Elliott in 1824 in Carroll or Jefferson County, Ohio. Belinda's parents have been listed in LDS sources as Aaron Pugh b in VA and Mary Greer b in MD, but with different sibling names. I am trying to untangle these families!

James McLaughlin, born about 1735 in Ireland, married Mary (last name unknown). His son John (born about 1758) married his cousin Nancy McLaughlin (daughter of Patrick McLaughlin). John was born in Derry, Ireland. They emigrated to western PA and had Robert, John, Edward, James, Patrick, Lydia, Elizabeth, Mary, Henry and William. Daniel died there in 1828, but his wife and children moved to Wayne and Fulton Counties OH. Descendants are still in that part of the country with many in Morenci, Hudson, Waldron, and Adrian MI. Looked through Daniel's genealogy, but didn't turn up a George and Nancy. However, it would not be suprising if the genealogy were missing some people or that descendents of Patrick's

I'm not sure, but there may be a chance we share a connection. My ancestor, Patrick McLaughlin (1754-1813), came from Ireland before the Revolutionary War. He lived in Eve Twp Cumberland Co had seven children: George, Margaret, Daniel, John, Samuel, Joseph and Anthony (my ancestor). I have a fairly complete genealogies for Daniel and Anthony, though Daniel's in 20 years old and in need of an update. Both Daniel and Anthony moved to Richland Co OH in 1823. Daniel died there in 1838, but his wife and children moved to Wayne and Fulton Counties OH. Descendants are still in that part of the country with many in Morenci, Hudson, Waldron, and Adrian MI. Looking through Daniel's genealogy, but didn't turn up a George and Nancy. However, it would not be surprising if the genealogy were missing some people or that descendants of Patrick's other children could have moved to an area close to other relatives (ie Adrian). Please write back with at least an address, so I can contact you in the future if I find a connection to George and Nancy.

Thanks, Mike

From: MMac2 @AOL.COM

I think you're correct: Mc is Irish and Mac is Scottish. Your name, mine (McLaughlin), and others that sound close are derivatives of MacLachlan and appear in both Ireland and Scotland. However, a wrinkle in this is that many emigrants from Ireland in the late 1700s had originally been from Scotland only a few generations before migrating to America. They're referred to as "Scotch-Irish".

Searching for info on Henry McLaughlin (born @ 1845-1850) who would probably be living in the Wise and Cooke County area of Texas around 1880. He married Sallie Rodgers about 1880-1881. They had 3 children: a) James Thomas, born 1881 b) Sarah, born @ 1882 c)Tony Boyd, born 1885. Story has it that Henry was killed by lightning in this same area some time in the late 1880s and that Sallie died not too long after. The 3 children were farmed out.

Does anyone know of a good source for old newspapers from this time and area? Any information will be greatly appreciated!

I'll be signing off soon (too much to do to keep up with VA-Roots), but I'd like to post a request for help sorting out the descendants of Paul WOODBRIDGE (1631-1691) and Bridget FITZHERBERT for the first two or three generations. Please, only DOCUMENTED information. There is a lot of speculation out there, some of it in print.

I. The first generation contains William, George, and Elizabeth WOODBRIDGE. William married Sarah KEENE and Sarah HULL (widow of Capt. Henry BRERETON). George seems to have married Mary PINCENT (letter from G.H.S. King, no source cited). Elizabeth married Manus MCLAUGHLIN and Peter TAFF.

Subject: WOODBRIDGE, old Rappahannock Co,VA, 17th-18th c

I'll be signing off soon ; too much to do to keep up with VA-Roots, but I'd like to post a request for help sorting out the descendants of Benj. WOODBRIDGE (1731-1801) and Bridget FITZ-HERBERT for the first two of these generations, please, only DOCUMENTED information. There is a lot of speculation out there, some of it in print.

1. The first generation contains William, George, and Elizabeth WOODBRIDGE, William married Sarah FERRE and Sarah NULL (widow of Capt. Henry PRESLEY). George seems to have married Mary PINCENT (sister from G.E.C. Kings, no source cited). Elizabeth married Magus MACKENZIE and Peter TAPP.

II. The second generation gets confused. William's children by Sarah KEENE were Capt. John WOODBRIDGE and Elizabeth WOODBRIDGE (N Farnham Parish Register). G.H.S. King says Elizabeth predeceased her brother, but cites no proof. Others say she married George YERBY and inherited her brother's property. William's daughter Sarah WOODBRIDGE b. 1714 (NFPR) must be by Sarah HULL, as Sarah KEENE had died before 1713. William also had a bastard son, William ROBERTSON, by Anne ROBERTSON (NFPR and Richmond Co Wills).

George's children, according to King, were George and Elizabeth. King says this Elizabeth is the one who married George YERBY, not her cousin. He does not give a wife or children for George Jr.

The first Elizabeth's children were Bridget, Anne, Elizabeth, Sarah, and Priscilla MCLAUGHLIN (Richmond Co. Wills) and John and Peter TAFF (Richmond Co. Wills).

Apparently there was a lawsuit in which a Keene and a Taff sued to possess Elizabeth WOODBRIDGE Yerby's inheritance from Capt. John WOODBRIDGE, claiming she was illegitimate. I have been unable to find the record of this suit, which King mentions in passing.

If anyone has seen the lawsuit and can definitively prove Elizabeth WOODBRIDGE Yerby's descent, I would be very happy. I would also like to know if her brother (cousin?) George had any children.

II. The second generation gets confused. William's children by Sarah KRENE were Capt. John WOODBRIDGE and Elizabeth WOODBRIDGE (Wardham Parish Register). G.R.S. William's daughter Sarah WOODBRIDGE b. 1714 (WFPR) must be by Sarah BUTT, as Sarah KRENE had died before 1713. I am new at this, so if I have made any mistakes, please forgive me, I will do better next time!!!!

d: Catherine "Caty" Hutcherson m. Joseph Keen married William Stears Jr.

d: Mary Ann Hutcherson married Henry Coleman, son of Edward d: Mary "Polly" Coleman m. Thomas Green and then John Cason
d: Catherine "Caty/Kitty" Coleman m. John Miller
d: Sallie Coleman m. James Thompson
d: Margaret "Peggy" Coleman m. Kenady McMillan
d: Sucky Coleman-never married

d: Lucretia "Lucy" Coleman m. William Moore d: Hannah Hutcherson m. John Coleman, son of Edward d: Elizabeth "Betsy" Coleman m. Travis Edwards
d: Caty Waggoner Coleman m. Jacob Coonrod
s: Robert Beverly Hutcherson m. Phoebe Carter
d: Eaney/Eddy Hutcherson m. Charles Phillips-Harrison Co.,KY
in 1797
s: Carter Hutcherson m. Elizabeth "Betsy" Eads-1803
s: Robert Waggoner Hutcherson
s: William Hutcherson

The query is about Robert Beverly Hutcherson. I found them in the Spotsylvania Co. Records as living in Caroline Co., VA. I also found them in Goochland Co., VA in the Douglas Register with their last two children. I know where all the other children went to, but I can not find out what happened to him. He died, as per a heir land grant, before 1813 supposedly in Clark Co., KY, but can not find an information proving that to be the case. I have found them in different tax lists in Kentucky after 1794. Could he have made out a will in Caroline Co.-is there a list somewhere of the early wills of Caroline or Goochland Co.??? Any help would be greatly appreciated. Thank you!!!!!!!!!!!! Margaret Hutchinson

Note: The Robert Hutcherson branch finally changed the spelling to Hutchinson in 1824 when they moved to Ohio. I think they just gave in as it was spelled so many ways in Kentucky.

The John Hutcherson basically stayed in Kentucky and kept the Hutcherson spelling.

James McLaughlin, born about 1735 in Ireland, married Mary (last name unknown). His son John (born about 1758) married his cousin Nancy McLaughlin (daughter of Patrick McLaughlin). John was born in Derry, Ireland. They emigrated to western PA and had Robert, John, Edward, James, Patrick, Lydia, Elizabeth, Mary, Henry and William. Mary married Andrew Brown and many of the family moved to Mercer County, PA and became some of the earliest pioneer settlers of that county. I'm not sure, but there may be a chance we share a connection. My ancestor, Patrick McLaughlin 1755-1813, came from Ireland before the Revolutionary War. He lived in Rye Twp Cumberland Co had several children: George, Margaret, Daniel, John, Samuel, Joseph and Anthony (my ancestor). I have a fairly complete genealogies for Daniel and Anthony, though Daniel's is 20 years old and in need of an update. Both Daniel and Anthony moved to Richland Co OH in 1823. Daniel died there in 1828, but his wife and children moved to Wayne and Fulton Counties OH. Descendants are still in that part of the country with many in Morenci, Hudson, Waldron, and Adrian MI. Looked through Daniel's genealogy, but didn't turn up a George and Nancy. However, it would not be suprising if the genealogy were missing some people or that descendents of Patrick's other children could have moved to an area close to other relatives (ie Adrian). Please write back with at least an address, so I can contact you in the future if I find a connection to George and Nancy. Thanks, Mike

Subj: Re:McGlothlin-Irish or Scottish
From: Mmarc Aol.com

I think you're correct: Mc is Irish and Mac is Scottish. Your name, mine (McLaughlin), and others that sound close are derivatives of MacLachlan and appear in both Ireland and Scotland. However, a wrinkle in this is that many emigrants from Ireland in the late 1700s had originally been from Scotland only a few generations before migrating to America. They're referred to as "Scotch-Irish".

I think you're correct: Mo is Irish and Mac is French. Your name, Aine (Anneyghin), and mixers like second cousins are derivations of Hanlanglin and appear in both Ireland and Scotland. However, a wrinkle in this is that many emigrants from Ireland in time lost their Gaelic and became Irish-Scots but certainly been from Scotland only a few generations before arriving in America. Subject: WOODBRIDGE, Old Rappahannock Co,VA, 17th-18th c

I'll be signing off soon (too much to do to keep up with VA-Roots), but I'd like to post a request for help sorting out the descendants of Paul WOODBRIDGE (1631-1691) and Bridget FITZHERBERT for the first two or three generations. Please, only DOCUMENTED information. There is a lot of speculation out there, some of it in print.

I. The first generation contains William, George, and Elizabeth WOODBRIDGE. William married Sarah KEENE and Sarah HULL (widow of Capt. Henry BRERETON). George seems to have married Mary PINCENT (letter from G.H.S. King, no source cited). Elizabeth married Manus MCLAUGHLIN and Peter TAFF.

II. The second generation gets confused. William's children by Sarah KEENE were Capt. John WOODBRIDGE and Elizabeth WOODBRIDGE (N Farnham Parish Register). G.H.S. King says Elizabeth predeceased her brother, but cites no proof. Others say she married George YERBY and inherited her brother's property. William's daughter Sarah WOODBRIDGE b. 1714 (NFPR) must be by Sarah HULL, as Sarah KEENE had died before 1713.
William also had a bastard son, William ROBERTSON, by Anne ROBERTSON (NFPR and Richmond Co Wills).

George's children, according to King, were George and Elizabeth. King says this Elizabeth is the one who married George YERBY, not her cousin. He does not give a wife or children for George Jr.

The first Elizabeth's children were Bridget, Anne, Elizabeth, Sarah, and Priscilla MCLAUGHLIN (Richmond Co. Wills) and John and Peter TAFF (Richmond Co. Wills).

Apparently there was a lawsuit in which a Keene and a Taff sued to possess Elizabeth WOODBRIDGE Yerby's inheritance from Capt. John WOODBRIDGE, claiming she was illegitimate. I have been unable to find the record of this suit, which King mentions in passing.

If anyone has seen the lawsuit and can definitively prove Elizabeth WOODBRIDGE Yerby's descent, I would be very happy. I would also like to know if her brother (cousin?) George had any children.

The query is about Robert Beverly Hutcherson. I found them in the Spotsylvania Co. Records as living in Caroline Co., VA. I also found them in Goochland Co., VA in the Douglas Register with their last two children. I know where all the other children went to, but I can not find out what happened to him. He died, as per a heir land grant, before 1813 supposedly in Clark Co., KY, but can not find an information proving that to be the case. I have found them in different tax lists in Kentucky after 1794. Could he have made out a will in Caroline Co.-is there a list somewhere of the early wills of Caroline or Goochland Co.??? Any help would be greatly appreciated. Thank you!!!!!!!!!!!! Margaret Hutchinson

Note: The Robert Hutcherson branch finally changed the spelling to Hutchinson in 1824 when they moved to Ohio. I think they just gave in as it was spelled so many ways in Kentucky.

The John Hutcherson basically stayed in Kentucky and kept the Hutcherson spelling.

I am looking for any information about a McLaughlin family from Ireland, we thing that emigrated ca 1851 to Canada and lived there for several years before coming to the Town of Chester, Warren County, NY.

What I have concerns the family of James McLaughlin and his wife Mary Berkley. When they came to Canada they had (at least) a daughter, Frances b ca 1847 and a son Samuel born either just before they left Ireland or during the trip to Canada on the ship. Samuel was born 13 Jun 1851.

Frances had a daughter, Daisy May, b Aug 1880, pro. in Canada. Frances was not married, and possibly worked for a family named Martindale or McMartin. One of these surnames may also have been the name of Daisy's father.

The poetry is about Robert Beverly Butcherson. I found that in the Spotsylvania Co. Records as living in Carolina Co., VA. I also found them in Goochland Co., VA in the Douglas Register with their last two children. I know where all the Lewis relation went to, but I can not find out what happened to him. As also, as per a well kept secret, before 1813 supposedly in Clark Co., KY, but can not find an information proving that to be the case. I have found them in different ex slave in Kentucky after 1794. Could he have made out a will in Carolina Co.-as there a lot somewhere of the Beverly wills of Carolina or Goochland Co.?? Any help would be greatly appreciated. Thank you!!!!!!!!! Margaret Butcherson

What the Robert Butcherson branch finally changed the spelling to Butchinson in 1874 when they moved to Ohio. I think they just gave in as it was spelled so many ways in Kentucky.

The John Butcherson basically stayed in Kentucky and kept the Butcherson spelling.

"Russell Co., VA Personal & Land Tax List 1787 through 1800, 1802, 1810" by Albert.

To the Honorable, The Speaker and House of Delegates —

The Petition of the inhabitants of the County of Russell humbly sheweth:

Whereas the Legislature of Virginia on the 30th day of January 1804 passed an Act for suspending the operation of the several laws directing the mode of processioning lands so far as the same related to the counties west of the Blue Ridge for the term of eight years which time is now expired; but the causes which they presumed induced the Legislature to pass that Act still exist in this county, some of which your petitioners beg leave to enumerate —— The county of Russell is nearly eighty miles in length and upwards of forty in breadth, two thirds at least of which is uninhabited; and altho' nearly the whole of the lands are surveyed, yet they are principally held by non-residents who cannot be compelled, (under the existing laws) to contribute their portion of the expences for processioning them: in consequence of which your Petitioners would be burthened with a levy they could not well defray owing to their thin population. Your petitioners also humbly conceive that there is no real necessity, at this period, for processioning their lands as the marks of the boundaries thereof are, in general, very legible. Therefore your petitioners pray your Honorable body would take their case into consideration and again suspend the operation of the several laws for processioning lands so far as they respect the county of Russell for the term of ten years; at which period your petitioners suppose a greater portion of the arable lands will be settled which will enable the inhabitants to carry the law into operation with greater facility. And as in duty bound, your Petitioners shall ever pray &c

Dear Vivian,

Thank you for sending the transcript of Elliott's murder trial. It doesn't give much detail, but I can get a feel for what may have happened. What is your interpretation of it? I had been told by a McGlothlin researcher that it was the result of a feud. This documentation doesn't give any indication one way or the other. The jury did not find him guilty of premeditated murder, but rather of second degree murder, and yet the court refers to the "peculiar atrocity" of the crime. And he got only 9 years, not life, or execution. What do you make of that? This is really interesting reading. Thanks so much for sending it to me.

Diane

Dear Vivian,

It is so good to hear from you! Your envelope full of Wampler information is wonderful. I have only glanced through it, but I saw the references to Eli Mclaughlin toward the back. Thank you so much for sending me copies. I'm looking forward to seeing what you find on the McLaughlins. You have always been so good at finding good stuff! I guess we can give up on the inquiry I made to Russell County about a year ago, requesting information on the trail of Eli's murder. I wish I knew someone in Russell County who could look up some things for us.

I have been working exclusively on my Connecticut families and neglecting my Virginia research. However, unlike Virginia, my Connecticut families seem well-documented and very few mysteries or unidentified people. Those New Englanders have been keeping records of their families for a LONG time, so I figure if someone hasn't been identified by now, I'm not likely to be able to. So when I'm done with my Connecticut line, I'll just close the book on that and get back to my Virginia people.

We are having just lovely weather here today, sunny and in the low 80's. My son Randy, who still lives with me, got a puppy a few weeks ago and Tanner has kept us busy! I haven't had a dog in my house in over 20 years, and I must admit I don't really like it. But Tanner is an adorable pup, and since Randy is building a house on land his father left him, they will both be gone soon enough.

I'm so glad you sent your e-mail address. I've even tried to find it only the Internet, but I'm not very good at getting around on the Net. This is my barebones address for e-mail only. It's easier to access than AOL, but I can't receive attachments to it, so if you want to send me anything fancy, try my AOL address.

Hi, Vivian

Don't fall over, I'm just trying to keep up, and either I type slow or this keyboard is not smart enough to know what I want it to do.

Eli and Mary were married in Rural Retreat, Va.,close to Wythville.

Eli and Mary were my 3rd G Grandparents and my direct is as follows:

Isreal m. Elizabeth Dougherty Sep 18, 1823
Nathan m. Ester Fugate abt.1855
Isreal m.Tibiatha Smith Mar28,1881
Nathan m. Pearl McAvoy Jan.06,1907 (My parents).

In working my direct line the dates and who they married become very important because of the repeated names, but if this line isn't hard enough they mixed the Smiths in just to confuse me.

Have a good day and know that we will be thinking of you folks during the illness in your family.

Vivian -

I just returned home a couple of hours ago from voting in local elections. While at the poll, I ran into former Congressman Wampler.

He immediately approached me to apologize for not responding to your inquiry last fall, explaining that he had about 20 boxes of genealogical materials and he simply had not gotten back into them. He did indicate that he planned to respond.

I briefly told him of your discovery regarding the Flanagan/Wampler connection. He got a real chuckle out of that. You have to realize that he, as a very conservative Republican, succeeded Congressman John W. Flannagan, a very liberal Democrat, in office for the 9th District of Virginia circa early 1950's. I'm sure the last thing he could imagine is that he was related to a Flannagan!! Congressman Flannagan has no identifiable connection with our line (though I worked with his son for 14 years). Congressman Flannagan's line came from Louisa County, VA.

In any event, I told Congressman Wampler I would send him a summary of our connection to the Wamplers. I hope that will spur him on to dig into his records. My earlier fears that perhaps he was simply not as mentally alert were unfounded. [It may be he didn't want to know he was related to Flannagans]. I was pleased to find that he is still quite mentally alert and had several colorful stories about the Wamplers of old.

I will certainly let you know if I gain any further information.

Vivian -

I received today, copies of some info from Russell County. I had asked a retired deputy court clerk who lives in Russell County to look for these records and they were delivered to me today. I will mail copies to you by regular mail. In the meantime, I thought I would give you an advance look at some interesting tidbits.

I have a copy of the deed you referred me to in Deed Book 9, page 265. That is a deed dated 1830 disposing of 97 acres purchased by Eli McLaughlin in 1814. It is signed by his widow, Mary, now remarried to Jacob King, as well as signed by five children of Eli and their spouses (one was single). Among the children signing was Elizabeth Flanagan along with her husband Philip. I also have a copy of the deed by which Eli acquired the 97 acres. Interestingly, the way McLaughlin is pronounced in our area is "McLofflan". In the early 1800's, it must have been different as you will note the original deed was to Ely McGlolin. It's easy to see the phonetic spelling of the person preparing the deed.

Also of interest are the records of the proceedings against John Elliott for the murder of Eli. He was first brought before the court on November 5, 1816. His trial was on April 17, 1817, following which a jury found him guilty of second degree murder and sentenced him to nine years. On the following day, the judge overruled a motion for a new trial and sentenced him in accordance with the jury verdict with the following addition to the sentence:

"that he be kept in a solitary cell ... on low and coarse diet for the space of one-half part of the said term, his case appearing to this court to be one of peculiar attrocity (sic)."

Of course the court orders contain no specific information about the facts of the case. I don't know if that information is available anywhere at this point, but I will continue to poke around.

Lastly, I have the 5-page inventory of the personalty in Eli's estate.

I'll send all of this to you after I have had an opportunity to make some copies.

Regards,

Charles

THE JOHN McGLOTHLIN FAMILY

John, born March 15, 1879 - deceased August, 1944, was the son of John and Martha Mutter McGlothlin. He was raised at Ward Siding below Finney. His father died before he was born, and the old saying goes, if you never saw your father you could cure the thrash (a disease of the mouth) that babies have. People would come from far and near to bring their sick babies to have John blow in their mouth. They would come to him on his job for his services, for which there was no charge. He went to work for the N & W Railroad in 1905, and worked until 1944 when he had a stroke on the job, and died four days later.

John and Martha McGlothlin

John met and married Nettie Honaker, born Oct. 26, 1886, deceased June 26, 1970. She was the daughter of Lilburn and Nancy Jane Honaker. She was raised in the Thompson Creek area.

John and Nettie had eight children, and lived in the Tunnel Hill section of Honaker. All the children attended Honaker High School where they received their education.

The first child born was Eura Mae. She lived only three weeks. Lon, born April 15, 1910, married Effie Combs, and has four children, Wayne, Loretta, Sylvia, and Darrell. Lon and Effie are farmers and live on the New Garden Road near Honaker.

Coy, born March 19, 1912, married Daisy Sykes, and has three children, Kermit, Phyllis, and Wanda. Coy has always been a coal miner, and lives on Tunnel Hill at Honaker.

Carl, born June 2, 1920, deceased 1938. He is remembered for his playing basketball at Honaker High School.

John, Jr., born May 4, 1924, married Betty Fuller and has two children, Johnny and Saundra. He worked for DuPont Co. and they make their home at North Augusta, SC.

Dollie, born Nov. 23, 1928 is married to Banner Wilson, from the Finney section of Russell County. They had four children, three deceased at an early age. Donna is married to Wayne Dye, and they live at Swords Creek, Va. They attended Honaker High School, and Wayne is employed by Jewell Smokeless Coal Co. Donna is employed by Clinch Valley Physicians. Dollie is employed by Russell County School System. Banner has many talents, brick mason, carpenter, and he worked for Jewell Smokeless Coal Co. until he retired in 1984. He is always ready to help people with their repairs and fixing things. They lived at "the old home place" across Tunnel Hill for several years until they purchased a new home near Honaker.

John was a very hard worker, and you could find Nettie by his side carrying her share of the load. They always believed in keeping their children busy, even if it was only picking up rocks in the garden and making fences. John was a good provider for his family.

John and Nettie attended the Primitive Baptist Church, and was always faithful to God and their Country. Submitted by: Dollie Wilson, P.O. Box 203, Honaker, VA 24260

McREYNOLDS

The earliest McReynolds ancestor we know of is John McRannell, born 1665 in the Highlands of Scotland. Having emigrated to Ireland in 1690, John married secondly, Elizabeth Shepherd in 1714. In 1737, Elizabeth, with the four children of this marriage and daughter-in-law, emigrated to America. John remained in Ireland, where he died in 1760. It was during the voyage to America that son Joseph (1715 - 1805) and his wife Sarah had their first-born, Robert. Eight other children were subsequently born in America.

In 1760, Robert married Martha Rich in Pennsylvania. After moving to North Carolina, Robert served as Ensign and Recruiting Officer in the American Revolution. Later, he lived in in North Carolina, was drafted into service during the Revolutionary War at age 16. He was wounded in war and crippled for the rest of his life. Joseph entered land in Reeds Valley in 1782. He went to North Carolina and married Rebecca Borin (Boren) in 1783. They returned to Reeds Valley, where Joseph built a home in 1795. This house, with nearby family cemetery, still stands. Joseph and Rebecca raised a large family, the youngest son of which was Isaac (1807-1896).

Isaac McReynolds, daughters, son and sons-in-law

In 1828, Isaac McReynolds married Susannah Walker, d/o Charles and Martha Walker. They resided all their lives in the home Isaac's father had built, and raised a family of nine. Four of their sons served in the Confederate Army, two of whom lost their lives during service. Isaac's son, Solomon (1837 - 1918), raised a large family, died and is buried at his homeplace in Wallace, Va. It is through Isaac's daughter, Susannah Mary (1852-1935), that our line continues.

In 1875, Mary McReynolds married Franklin Pierce Jessee, s/o Noah and Elizabeth Kiser Jessee. They lived in Honaker and Reeds Valley, near Cleveland, and were among the earliest members of Pleasant Hill Baptist Church. Their children were: Ira, who married Ella Smith; Ada, who married Charles Wallace and had children; Eliza, who married Floyd Skeen and had children and Martha (Mattie), who married Dr Bob Graham.

Eliza Jessee (1883-1944) married Elijah Floyd Skeen in 1900. Floyd was s/o James Patton and Elizabeth Breeding Skeen. They lived and farmed in Reeds Valley, and raised their seven children there. They had: (1) Ira (1901 1975) m: V. Bailey; (2) Jessee Wilkinson (1904-1979); (3) Ruth Going (b 1907); (4) Mattie Stuart (b: 1910); (5

McGlothlin was born April 19, 1916, lived in Russell County all his life, a miner and farmer. He was married on June 29, 1931 at Blountville, Tn. to Effie Wright Combs in Honaker, where she lived all her life. To them was born four children, two boys and two girls. The oldest, a son Douglas Wayne was born April 1, 1939. He is married to the former Linda Mullins. They reside in Narrows, Virginia and have three sons, Bryan, Bradley and Cory. The youngest McGlothlin son was born May 9, 1952, his name is Darrell Neal and he is married to Patricia Quesenberry. They reside in Honaker near the parents and have two sons, Darrell Craig age 7 and Joshua Neal age 4.

Lon has three brothers; Coy of Honaker, Claude of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio and John Jr. of North Augusta, S.C. and one sister, Dollie Wilson of Honaker. Effie was an only child. Lon and Effie both attended High School in Honaker. Effie attended Radford College in 1930 and 1931.

Effie writes a news letter for the Lebanon News and the Richlands News Press and has for 30 years. She also loves to piece quilts.

They attend New Garden Baptist Church in the New Garden Community, near their home where they have been members since 1950. Effie is clerk of the church and was pianist for several years. Lon is a deacon and served as Sunday School superintendent for several years. All four of their children were baptized into the membership of this same church.

Lon and Effie were both raised in the farm where they now live and have lived for 41 years. Lon suffered a stroke in December 1986 and is a partial shut-in. Submitted by: Mrs. Lon McGlothlin, Route 1, Box 202, Honaker, VA 24260

Welcome back!

I understand how you feel a little, I am becoming obsessed with this research thing. I was thinking of transcribing some cemetaries but my wife thinks I am nuts. Any way I thank you for the information and effort. My wife is a McGlothlin descended from two of three brothers John, Jacob(her ancestors), and Stephen. All three served in the Rev War enlisting in NC together. The confusion is with this generation of the family were they started to use the different spelling of McGlothlin. Stephen's branch kept it McLaughlin. All came from SC originally and lived for a time in NC after the War before moving to VA where most information on them is found. All were listed on the 1790 Randolph Co. NC Census as Heads of Households spelled McGloughlin; also listed was an ANN in a seperate household with 3 boys and 4 girls. Who they were I don't know. I believe ANN was the brothers' mother but I can find nothing yet to show it or anything at all with their father.
The person I was trying to match with your Eli McLaughlin was an Elias McGlothlin/McLaughlin born about 1810 in VA(this information was from an LDS ancestry file by Henry Richardson) I have no other information except that it shows him as a son of the John b1757 - d1848 (above) and Judith Leathers b1763 -d after 1858 (some of those dates may not be exact) married 1 Apr 1785 in NC. Most of the information I have on them is from the Rev. War pensions. Jacob b abt 1761 d 22 Jan 1831 married a Mary b abt 1767 of unknown last name. Stephan married Nancy Tate(or Tait). The main question is was Eli a brother to John, Jacob, and Stephan or was he one of the unknown children for them? Or even some other relative?

What othe information would you like to know? Well I think that is enough for now. Let me know if you have anything that might help.

Thanks again, I will look into Wyth Co. more.
